Self-serve gas users come in trickles, stations find

Daily Herald staff report

Self-service gas stations are sputtering and dying in the Northwest suburbs, the apparent victims of customers unwilling to pump their own gasoline.

A Daily Herald staff survey of gas stations in the area found many have pulled out of self-service recently and returned to mini-service because they were losing sales at do-it-yourself pumps.

"I wanted to be the first in the area to have self-serve just to prove to these dingbats (oil companies) that in an area such as ours, we don't have a large group of working people who can afford to get dirty and smelly on their way to the office," said Richard Grzebieniak, operator of Nursery Standard, 2250 S. Arlington Heights Rd., Arlington Heights. He abandoned self-service Wednesday.

GASOLINE SALES dropped off 250 to 300 gallons a day during the period he offered self-serve, May 31 to Sept. 28, Grzebieniak said.

"The price is not any different and it's an inconvenience to many people. It just didn't sit right with me standing here watching people pump their own gas," he said.

Lester Napier, manager at Mickey's Standard, 3 E. Golf Rd., Arlington Heights, said his customers did not really like self-service, but also were not willing to pay 10 cents more a gallon for full-service.

"So they just drove down the street to where they could find mini-serve," said Napier, who dropped self-serve sales this week because "we just weren't selling any gas." He estimates sales were down 500 gallons a day.

Self-service gas began in Illinois May 1 when Gov. James R. Thompson issued an order changing state fire laws to allow motorists to pump their own gasoline.

IT WAS HAILED as a benefit to consumers because prices were expected to be 2 to 5 cents less than mini-service.

Grzebieniak said he was not able to cut his labor costs because he needed attendants to watch the self-service pumps to ensure that customers would pay after filling up.

"We lost $37 in one weekend from pullouts. One guy just dropped the nozzle and took off with $11 in gas," said William Miseska, Rolling Meadows Shell, Kirchoff Rd. and Meadow Dr., Rolling Meadows, who said self-service was working out "atrociously."

"I'm contemplating getting rid of it and going back to mini-service," he said.

Bill Moore, attendant at a Standard station, 995 S. Elmhurst Rd., Wheeling, told a similar story.

"You have to have somebody watch the pump anyway, so why not have mini-serve instead?" he said. The station, which put in self-serve earlier this month, probably will go back to mini-serve, Moore said.

NOT EVERYONE complains about a loss of business from self-service. "It's not a tremendous part of our business, but it has increased our volume in the area of three to four thousand gallons a month. Generally, the customers like it," said Joe Scarnato, Rolling Meadows Standard, 3300 Kirchoff Rd., Rolling Meadows.

Teacher salaries in Northwest suburban elementary schools fall far short of those Chicago school teachers receive, but starting salaries for suburban high school teachers match Chicago's and are higher at the end of the pay scale.

However, suburban teachers generally have to wait much longer to get those pay increases, a comparison of the Chicago teachers' tentative two-year contract agreement and 1977-78 suburban pay schedules also shows.

Teachers and the Chicago School Board reached the tentative agreement early Thursday on a two-year contract that would raise teachers' salaries 5 per cent each year and avert a strike scheduled for Monday.

SCHOOL SUPT. Joseph Hannon and Chicago Teachers Union Pres. Robert Healey sealed the pact with a handshake. Healey and Hannon issued a joint statement praising the contract as "providing stability and opening an new era of understanding" between the board and Chicago's 26,000 public school teachers.

Hannon said the new contract will cost $24 million more this year than the old one, but said the board still could reduce its deficit. He said the board also guaranteed teachers a full school year. The CTU will have an emergency session today, and Healey said he will recommend that teachers accept the pact. The contract will be voted on Thursday.

The tentative pact would raise salaries 5 per cent this year, but because the raise won't take effect until Nov. 1, incomes for the school year will show an increase of only 4 per cent.

THE STARTING salary for Chicago teachers, which is the same for both elementary and high school teachers, will be $11,400 under the tentative 1977-78 contract, while top pay is $23,775, according to a Chicago Board of Education spokesman.

The highest Northwest suburban elementary school district base pay is $10,605 in East Maine Dist. 63, while High School Dist. 211 tops Chicago with a starting salary of $11,500.

But while Chicago teachers do not start at salaries much greater than the top-paying suburban school districts, they get quicker and larger pay increases.

There are a number of reasons for this, area teacher representatives say. Chicago may still have to entice teachers with higher starting salaries and quick raises, but suburban districts don't. Teachers tend to stay longer in the suburbs. And suburban school districts may increase pay more slowly to encourage teachers to continue their educations.

A CHICAGO elementary school teacher with a bachelor's degree would get $15,875 after six years and $17,855 after nine. In comparison a Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 teacher who started at $10,325 would

Shopping area-office proposal to be debated

by BILL HILL

Arlington Heights officials Monday will debate how big a downtown shopping center-office building should be to ensure success.

The two development teams that have submitted proposals for building a multilevel commercial and office center with a parking garage disagreed at a meeting Thursday night on how big Arlington Heights' downtown development should be.

At the meeting attended by eight of the nine village board members, representatives of a development team headed by Crane Construction Co. insisted a shopping center should have at least 100,000 square feet.

"We looked at the possibility of a smaller proposal but we decided it would never work. We tried to do a minimal proposal with the understanding that if we were overly ambitious, no one was going to listen to us," said Greg Heine of Crane Construction Co.

THE PROPOSAL submitted by the team formed by Crane Construction Co., Development Control Corp. and architects Welton Becket & Associates, all of Chicago, calls for 130,000 square feet of retail space and at least 90,000 square feet of office space with a 575-car parking garage.

"That's not cast in iron. We are asking for the chance to study the situation. We're certain there is terrific potential here. What has to be figured out is how to get the people here," Heine said.

The main stumbling block of the Crane team's proposal, village officials agreed, is that it would require the acquisition of the Dunton Court Shopping Center, whose owner insists he isn't interested in selling.

Japan ransom extension

DACCA, Bangladesh (UPI) — Five guerrillas threatened Thursday to blow up their hijacked jet with 146 hostages aboard and set off a "global" terror campaign if Japan breaks its promise to free nine prisoners and pay $6 million ransom, but they extended the deadline by more than a day.

The hijackers freed five hostages — two Americans and an Indian family of three reported to reside in California.

Japan, saying "human life is more precious than the earth," agreed to the demands but said it could not meet the terrorists' original midnight deadline.

WITH ONLY 20 minutes to go on the deadline, the hijackers granted a 28-hour extension to allow Japan time to gather the money and prisoners together. A Japanese spokesman said they had gathered $2 million in U.S. $100 bills but the remaining $4 million might have to be flown from the United States.

The new deadline was set to expire at 5 p.m. CDT Friday.

Japan also reported that one of the jailed radicals the hijackers have demanded freed refused to leave jail.

Bangladesh officials negotiated with the hijackers, armed with grenades, pistols and plastic explosives, to gain the extension and a U.S. diplomat was at Dacca airport seeking word on up to nine U.S. citizens believed aboard the plane.

THE TERRORISTS from the Japanese Red Army released five American residents earlier Thursday — an ailing young yoga student, a weeping actress and a married couple and their child — and won food and fuel supplies, but they gave no hint of their next move.

The freed hostages reported the passengers and crew still aboard the plane were calm as their ordeal dragged on for more than 40 hours.

Japan agreed to submit to the hijackers' demands but said the logistics of rounding up radicals at prisons throughout the country and assembling a $6 million ransom all in U.S. $100 bills were so complicated they could not meet the demands until this afternoon.

Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda said his government yielded because "human life is more precious than the earth."

TOKYO'S JUSTICE Minister, Hajima Fukuda, resigned in protest at his government's capitulation.

The gunmen — four were Japanese, the fifth wore a mask and all appeared to be under the age of 30 — told Dacca airport officials they would detonate the jet and launch a terrorist "program on a larger, global scale" unless they win all their demands.

In another of their radioed messages the hijackers said they would release women, children, Indians and Pakistanis aboard the plane after delivery of the prisoners and the cash, and keep the other hostages aboard until they reach their ultimate destination, which was not known.

Burning cross welcomes black family

by ROBERT KYLE

David Ryan never wanted to be "a pioneer."

When he moved to Hanover Park two weeks ago, he didn't know he would be the only black man living in the village's Longmeadows South subdivision. He didn't even care. It didn't seem important.

"I was just looking for a decent place for my kids, for a place convenient to my job," he said. "My sister lives over in Hoffman Estates and she never had any problems. It seemed like a pretty decent area."

THE FIRST HINT of trouble came Tuesday night when someone vomited on Ryan's car. And then someone threw bottles at his garage. And then, on Wednesday night, someone poured gasoline on the lawn of his rented duplex and set it on fire.

The scar it left was in the shape of a cross.

"I didn't think people behaved like this," he said sadly. "This is straght out of the 1800s. It's the act of someone who is very sick."

Police Chief Robert Sauer of Hanover Park said his investigators have "some pretty likely people in mind."

"As far as I'm concerned, this is an act of vandalism," he said. "We'll probably find that this is the same bunch of people who've been giving us trouble in the past, driving across lawns, knocking down trees, breaking windows.

"I DON'T THINK this family is in any danger outside of having more nuisance problems," he said. "But I intend to put a stop to this problem if it takes every police officer I've got to do it."

Sauer said his men interviewed residents along Ryan's block, but turned up no one who saw anything before Ryan himself spotted the fire and called the police shortly after 10 p.m.

Many of Ryan's neighbors seemed uncomfortable talking about the incident and refused to give their names.

It was "unfortunate and unnecessary" said one. It was "mean" said another. "I feel terrible about this," said a third. "I haven't met her, but I talked to her husband once and he seemed very nice."

STILL ANOTHER neighbor said she feared the cross-burners might strike again. "We're so close," she said, "they might make a mistake and set the fire here."

It is the reaction, or lack of it, from his neighbors that bothers Ryan the most.

"The ones who did this are just sick," he said. "But nobody else around here ever said anything. One guy who doesn't even live here stopped his car and apologized for the

Legion disease cases reported in Tennessee

ATLANTA (UPI) — A team of medical detectives Thursday investigated a new outbreak of Legionnaires' disease in Tennessee. The pneumonia-like illness has shown up in 19 states since 29 persons died after contracting the ailment in Philadelphia more than a year ago.

The national Center for Disease Control said its diagnostic laboratories here have been swamped with blood and tissue samples from patients suspected of having the illness.

A CDC spokesman said specimens for diagnosis were arriving at the rate of about 200 a day, far more than the center normally handles.

AS OF THURSDAY, the CDC said there have been 54 confirmed cases of Legionnaires' disease with 14 deaths in the 19 states since the Philadelphia outbreak in July 1976. However, health officials in Vermont later Thursday reported two more cases and warned additional cases may be confirmed soon.

The CDC sent two epidemiologists and an environmental investigator to Kingsport, Tenn., where one hospital patient was confirmed to have contracted the disease, and two were suspected of having it.

Although many cases around the nation have been observed in hospitals, Dr. David Fraser, head of the CDC's pathogens branch, said the link between the disease and hospitals, if any, "is still an open issue."

He said the older age of most victims, the fact that many had underlying illnesses and that some had been taking medication might be a factor. But the significance was yet to be determined.

BUT DR. R. H. Hutcheson, director of the Tennessee Health Department's Communicable Disease Control Division, said the association with Holston Valley Community Hospital in Kingsport was a possibility.

"I wouldn't rule out the possibility that the location around the hospital is a high-risk area," he said. The CDC environmental investigator was to try to determine a common source of the infection and one of the areas to be checked was the hospital, a center spokesman said.

The CDC said the surfacing of cases across the country does not show an increasing frequency of the ailment, rather better and more widespread detection.

Widespread publicity associated with recent outbreaks in Columbus, Ohio, and Burlington, Vt., apparently has stirred the interest of doctors and added to the flow of information and suspect samples going to the CDC.

Early outbreak of croup reported at local hospital

An unusually early outbreak of croup, a childhood respiratory infection characterized by a harsh, barking cough and high temperature, has been reported by officials at Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights.

Pat Isabelle, RN, in pediatrics, said the hospital already has seen a volume of cases normally not encountered until October or November. She said damp, cool weather may be a factor in the early appearance of the viral infection.

"If croup can't be cleared up at home, doctors will hospitalize the children so they can be put into a high humidity tent," Ms. Isbelle said.

Croup can be a serious illness when the larynx is swollen, blocking the opening into the lungs. It can cause breathing distress and even result in suffocation if not treated properly.

Doctors also think croup can be aggravated by asthma and respiratory allergies.

Ms. Isbelle said the pediatrics unit at Northwest was "really filled up" with croup cases. But spokesmen at three other Northwest suburban hospitals reported no early cases of the infection.

Legion disease cases reported in Tennessee

ATLANTA (UPI) — A team of medical detectives Thursday investigated a new outbreak of Legionnaires' disease in Tennessee. The pneumonia-like illness has shown up in 19 states since 29 persons died after contracting the ailment in Philadelphia more than a year ago.

The national Center for Disease Control said its diagnostic laboratories here have been swamped with blood and tissue samples from patients suspected of having the illness.

A CDC spokesman said specimens for diagnosis were arriving at the rate of about 200 a day, far more than the center normally handles.

AS OF THURSDAY, the CDC said there have been 54 confirmed cases of Legionnaires' disease with 14 deaths in the 19 states since the Philadelphia outbreak in July 1976. However, health officials in Vermont later Thursday reported two more cases and warned additional cases may be confirmed soon.

The CDC sent two epidemiologists and an environmental investigator to Kingsport, Tenn., where one hospital patient was confirmed to have contracted the disease, and two were suspected of having it.

Although many cases around the nation have been observed in hospitals, Dr. David Fraser, head of the CDC's pathogens branch, said the link between the disease and hospitals, if any, "is still an open issue."

He said the older age of most victims, the fact that many had underlying illnesses and that some had been taking medication might be a factor. But the significance was yet to be determined.

BUT DR. R. H. Hutcheson, director of the Tennessee Health Department's Communicable Disease Control Division, said the association with Holston Valley Community Hospital in Kingsport was a possibility.

"I wouldn't rule out the possibility that the location around the hospital is a high-risk area," he said. The CDC environmental investigator was to try to determine a common source of the infection and one of the areas to be checked was the hospital, a center spokesman said.

The CDC said the surfacing of cases across the country does not show an increasing frequency of the ailment, rather better and more widespread detection.

Widespread publicity associated with recent outbreaks in Columbus, Ohio, and Burlington, Vt., apparently has stirred the interest of doctors and added to the flow of information and suspect samples going to the CDC.

Amin no madman: Ugandan ex-official

by GERRY KERN

Idi Amin is not a madman.

Henry Kyemba is adamant about that. He ought to know. He was Amin's health minister until May when he defected in fear of his life.

Field Marshal Idi Amin Dada — the tyrant who has plunged Uganda into a blood bath since his takeover in 1971, is many things, Kyemba says. He is a vicious swaggering braggart — a superstitious and brutal man who kills without compunction.

HE IS A thief who has plundered Uganda's meager wealth for himself and sent at least 150,000 of his countrymen to torturous death.

He is devoid of morals, but he is not crazy, Kyemba said. He knows exactly what he is doing. And until countries like the United States, Britain and the Arab oil states stop trading with him — providing him with the goods he needs — Amin will continue his reign of terror.

"He's so brutal and ruthless that people have explained that he can only be mad," Kyemba said. "But there is a difference between a murderer and a madman. A madman takes a machine gun and kills everyone around him without thought. All of the killings Amin has committed have a pattern. He has removed those who could be a threat."

Kyemba, a slim, nattily dressed man, is the last high government official to leave Uganda unscathed. He was in Chicago Thursday to discuss his book, "A State of Blood: The Inside Story of Idi Amin" — a book he hopes will lead to the downfall of the Amin regime and enable him to return home.

Before Kyemba's defection from the southern African nation of 11 million in May of this year, the world only had vague notions of the Ugandan ordeal. Because the reports were written mostly by white Western journalists, Amin was able to dismiss them as "imperialist propaganda," Kyemba said.

BUT NOT NOW. Kyemba brought with him stories of Amin's atrocities, which already are old news. In his book, Kyemba vividly details the horror stories:

• Thousands of bodies of Amin victims are dumped into the Nile so the crocodiles will eat them. However, there are more bodies than crocodiles, and the dead litter the banks downstream.

• Amin's men dragged Dora Bloch out of her hospital bed and killed her in retaliation for the Israeli raid on Entebbe airport to free hostages held by Palestinian terrorists. Mrs. Bloch had been accidently left behind in the rescue. Amin's men dumped her body in woods outside Kampala.

• The archbishop of Uganda and two high ministers were riddled with bullets by Amin's henchmen. They did not die in an automobile accident as Amin claimed.

• Two American freelance journalists, Robert Siedle and Nicholas Stroh, son of the Detroit brewer, were murdered in July, 1971 when they asked too many questions. Their bodies were dumped into a river.

The list of atrocities and the names of the victims are endless. Yet much about Amin and how re retains his power is a mystery to those in the West.

Kyemba tried to explain.

Amin thrives on praise and attention. He surrounds himself with those who lavish it upon him.

"You must praise him, compliment him. You must tell him he is doing a good job," Kyemba said. "You survive around him by telling him things he can do to get world attention. Those are the kinds of things that are given him."

His only allies are a band of 15,000 mercenaries from southern Sudan who ride roughshod over the army and the civilian population. The mercenaries remain loyal because he lavishes goods on them and permits them to pillage the country and its citizens. Without that loot, Amin would have no backers.

AMIN AND HIS soldiers are ignorant men "who know only how to use a gun," Kyemba said. Because Amin is so uneducated, he hates the intellectual and cultural elite of the country. That is why he has systematically murdered every prominent professional person, or at least driven them from Uganda. He has so completely reduced the ranks of trained professionals, that Kyemba fears there will be no competent leaders left to rule after Amin is deposed.

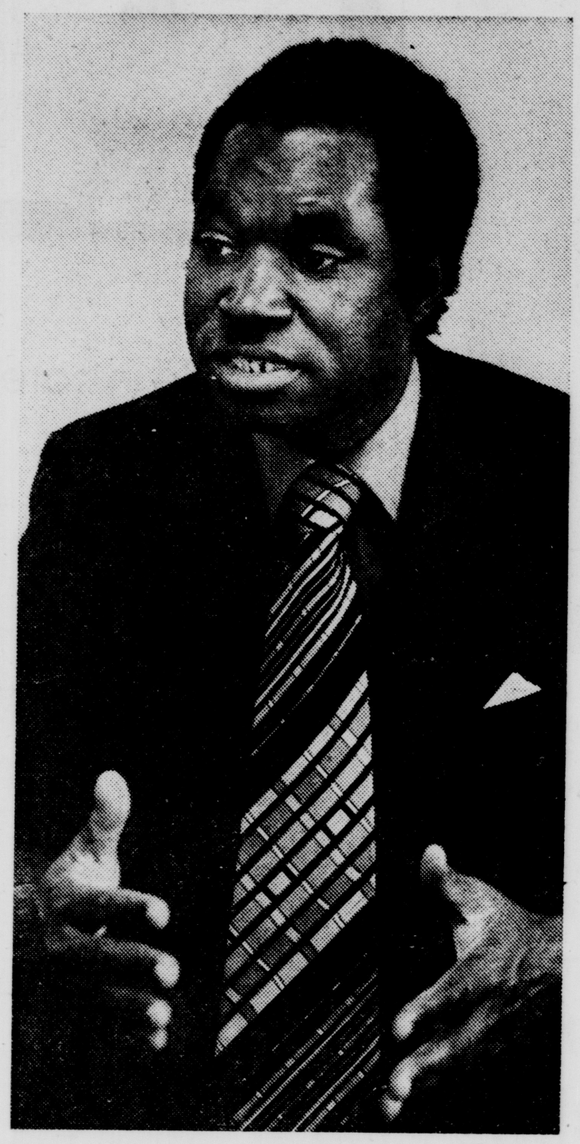
As if the murders are not enough, Amin must humiliate his victims even in death, Kyemba said. He said, "Amin is the most superstitious man I know." That superstition has led Amin to the acts of cannibalism and blood tasting that have become famous.

Amin is a member of the Kakwa tribe, which believes by tasting the blood of slain enemies the dead's spirits will be rendered harmless.

When the bodies of prominent victims are brought into a morgue in Kampala, Amin asks to be left alone inside with them.

"Hardly any Ugandan doubts that Amin, quite literally, has a taste for blood," Kyemba said.

BUT THE CANNIBALISM to which Amin has admitted and the mutilation of bodies is "very un-African," Kyemba said.



Henry Kyemba. . .Amin brutal, not mad.

"It is one thing to taste the blood of a victim, as Amin's tribe does," he said. "But it is another to open a man up and cut out his liver, or store his head inside the refrigerator as Amin has done. He will do it as a means to humiliate people and show his power. He will do it if it means he will be in power one day longer."

But Amin is not a madman? Brutal, but not mad, Kyemba says.

If Amin is not mad, then he can be held responsible for what he has done. Kyemba believes it is only a matter of time before the Amin regime collapses. There will be a day of reckoning for "Big Daddy."

But when that happens will depend on the actions of Britain, the United States and the Arab oil countries. All contribute to Amin's power by remaining active trading partners with Uganda.

The United States is Uganda's biggest coffee customer, and the Arabs, particularly Libya, provide much of the cash Amin needs. Britain regularly sells consumer goods to Amin — "whiskey" runs as Kyemba calls them — which Amin gives to his thugs to keep them loyal.

If these countries would cut off the trade, Amin would fall from power. Yet, Kyemba says, these countries have not done so because black African nations have not unanimously condemned Amin. Without that, trade will go on and so will Amin.

WHEN THE KILLERS are removed from power, and justice prevails again, where will Kyemba be? Will he have charges to answer?

Although he now condemns Amin, he served him for five years — through the killings and the plundering. He was the last of Amin's original ministers to leave.

Kyemba knew about the murders — as did many Ugandans — as early as 1972. He stayed on even after Amin ordered Kyemba's brother killed. He stayed on even though the most respectable of Uganda's citizens were fleeing. Why?

"I felt I could have an impact if I stayed. For me to leave Uganda, I would have to decide whether I could play a better role from within or from the outside. I decided it was better if I worked from within."

Kyemba said he realized this year — after the murder of the Ugandan archbishop that there was no hope. Kyemba said his own murder was being plotted.

"I have never regretted that I stayed on to be a witness to what was happening," he said. "I saved quite a few lives, and I helped some friends. I won't have to justify my actions when Amin has gone."

Late recess means new try on gas bill accord today

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd kept the Senate in its third straight night session Thursday in a futile effort to work out a compromise on natural gas legislation. He ordered the senators back for another try Friday morning.

The West Virginia Democrat recessed the Senate at 10:27 p.m. CDT after he was unable to get two warring factions to agree to begin voting on major amendments to the bill.

Every proposal he made drew an objection from either those who want to deregulate gas prices or those wanting price controls.

BYRD FINALLY gave up and asked the leaders of both sides to join him in his office in the morning to try to work out an agreement.

"I think I have made a good faith effort to try to arrange an understanding as to when we could vote," he said after repeated rebuffs.

Tempers grew short as the Senate struggled to end the 10-day filibuster first started by opponents of deregulation.

After nine days of silence, Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, rose to charge that senators opposed to deregulation of gas prices were being "steamrollered" by the majority.

"I don't like the smell of it," Muskie shouted.

MUSKIE SAID he had long opposed filibusters "but I'm just as opposed to steamroller tactics as I am to dilatory tactics."

Muskie's ire was aroused by an effort to wipe out hundreds of amendments offered by the filibusterers by having them called up and ruled out of order one by one.

Sen. Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., who was in the chair, noted at one point that there were still 385 amendments left.

Senate leaders had succeeded in getting opponents of deregulation to suspend their filibuster temporarily Thursday morning so that a compromise plan could be brought to the floor.

That plan would extend existing federal price regulation but also allow ceilings to be raised higher than President Carter wants.

THE CATCH was that proponents of deregulation reserved the right to amend the compromise bill to restore deregulation provisions, and their opponents said they would resume their filibuster if that occurred.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, a leader of the anti-deregulation filibuster, told a reporter "all bets are off" on the compromise plan if any effort is made to add deregulation provisions.

After the Senate brought Democratic Leader Robert Byrd's compromise to the floor by voice vote, Sen. Russell Long, D-La., took charge.

Long's tactic was to rob Metzenbaum and his ally, Democrat James Abdurezk of South Dakota, of the means to revive their filibuster by bringing up all the delaying amendments they had been keeping in reserve and disposing of them by quick voice votes.

Abdurezk tried to stall by demanding time-consuming roll call votes, but his tired and groggy colleagues refused to allow it.

LONG ALSO ignored Abourezk's challenge to call up the central amendment providing for deregulation of new gas in the heart of the dispute.

"If the definition of a filibuster is 'an act of piracy,' then I don't want to be a gentleman doing business with pirates," Long said at one point. "I have proved my talent as a filibusterer.

"If the other guy wants to be a poor loser, then I want to be a poor loser," Long said, waving his arms in a Senate that sat silent except for some chuckles.

Earlier, when Byrd's compromise seemed as though it might carry the day, Abourezk and Metzenbaum said they would vote for it "with reluctance, but we are interested in ending the impasse."

We were strangers: ex-resident

by JOHN LAMPINEN

After five years, the memories don't haunt Willard F. Williamson and his family.

They have put the incident behind them. They have moved away. They rarely think about it.

But there are reminders.

Like Wednesday night. When someone burned a cross in front of a house owned by David Ryan, a black man who has lived at 1150 Countryside in the Longmeadows South subdivision of Hanover Park for two weeks.

"PREJUDICE AND bias are still pretty much with us," Williamson said Thursday. "The incident doesn't surprise me. I'm saddened by it, but it doesn't surprise me."

Williamson is white.

But he knows a lot about prejudice.

In 1972, he and his wife decided the kitchen in their Schaumburg home was too small and there was no place for the children to play. So they put a down payment on a fashionable one-level home in the Greenbrook subdivisin of Hanover Park and prepared to move in.

There was just one problem. Many of the neighbors did not want the Williamsons. They had an 11-month-old adopted daughter named Joy.

She was black.

BEFORE THEY had even moved in, the Williamsons began getting midnight phone calls. At one point, a group of the neighbors confronted them and told them "in no uncertain terms" that they weren't wanted.

And then, one night in April, it happened: the burning cross on the lawn.

Burning cross welcomes family

actions of the people around here, but the others don't get involved.

"To me, this is the unfriendliest neighborhood I've ever been in. I guess they're afraid of us. I don't know why."

Ryan, 26, a railroad conductor, is not afraid. He said he's "a little concerned" about his wife and children, but he's not planning to move.

But there's nothing to keep him in Hanover Park either.

"Nobody wants to get involved," he said. "When you live in a community, when you want to become part of a community — and I'm not saying that I do — you've got to share each other's problems to make it grow."

Looking back on it, Williamson said he doesn't blame Hanover Park. It could have happened in Schaumburg, Elgin or anywhere else.

"We just happened to be in the wrong place at the wrong time," he said.

The family had not moved into the house yet, and there was a time when they considered dissolving the transaction. But it became a matter of principle.

"WE HAD COMMITTED ourselves," Williamson recalled. "Not just when we got the house, but when we adopted Joy. We committed ourselves. We couldn't back down."

There always was a tension.

"While we lived there," Williamson said, "we were strangers in a strange land. It was like living in an empty lot."

Things could haave been different, he believes, and he concedes that his family was part of the reason they weren't. They made no attempt to smooth things over with those who had attacked them. After all that had happened, it was a difficult thing to do.

So they stayed three years. Joy grew, and although she wasn't particularly conscious of the prejudice, there were occasionals signs she eventually would recognize. Little things, such as the times children in the neighborhood had parties and she wasn't invited.

TWO YEARS AGO, they moved to Elgin. It could have just as easily been another part of Hanover Park, Williamson says, it just turned out that it was Elgin instead.

But still, there are occasional slights to a black child raised by white parents and she is beginning to sense it.

"We hear comments that she would like to be white," Williamson said. "As much as we tell her that black is beautiful, we hear them."

There are always reminders.

VANDALS BURNED a cross-shaped scar into the lawn of David Ryan's home in Hanover Park Wednesday night.

Food stamp reforms may eliminate some families

Low-income families in the Northwest suburbs may suffer as a result of new food stamp reforms signed into law Thursday by President Carter.

Tighter eligibility requirements could eliminate families at or above federal poverty guidelines who previously have been able to get food stamps.

Nationally, 1.5 million of the current 16.2 million persons are expected to be dropped, even though the reforms are expected to bring an estimated 3 million new recipients into the $5.6 billion food stamp program.

"Poverty in the Northwest suburbs is relative. A family might be just above the poverty line nationally but below the poverty line in terms of what it costs to live in this area," said Michael Raimondi, director of the Northwest Opportunity Center.

Raimondi said he would have to study the new regulations to determine in detail how low-income families in the Northwest suburbs will be affected.

THE FOOD STAMP program was extended for four years as a part of an omnibus $10.5 billion farm bill Carter once threatened to veto as too expensive.

"In the last 40 years there never has been such a far-reaching and important piece of legislature passed relating to American agriculture," Carter said.

In return for accepting crop supports higher than he wanted, Carter won the food stamp reforms he wanted.

The bill represented a "great step forward" in overhauling the stamp program, he said.

The new law eliminates the requirements that participants buy stamps. It also authorizes a test in 14 areas of a "workfare" program under which some able-bodied stamp recipients would have to earn their free stamps by working on public service jobs.

Target prices and loan rates for wheat, corn, rice and cotton are raised by the bill.

Other provisions call for expanded research programs in solar energy and human nutrition and the "food for peace" foreign aid program.

Idi Amin is not a madman.

Henry Kyemba is adamant about that. He ought to know. He was Amin's health minister until May when he defected in fear of his life.

Field Marshal Idi Amin Dada — the tyrant who has plunged Uganda into a blood bath since his takeover in 1971, is many things, Kyemba says. He is a vicious swaggering braggart — a superstitious and brutal man who kills without compunction.

HE IS A thief who has plundered Uganda's meager wealth for himself and sent at least 150,000 of his countrymen to torturous death.

He is devoid of morals, but he is not crazy, Kyemba said. He knows exactly what he is doing. And until countries like the United States, Britain and the Arab oil states stop trading with him — providing him with the goods he needs — Amin will continue his reign of terror.

"He's so brutal and ruthless that people have explained that he can only be mad," Kyemba said. "But there is a difference between a murderer and a madman. A madman takes a machine gun and kills everyone around him without thought. All of the killings Amin has committed have a pattern. He has removed those who could be a threat."

Kyemba, a slim, nattily dressed man, is the last high government official to leave Uganda unscathed. He was in Chicago Thursday to discuss his book, "A State of Blood: The Inside Story of Idi Amin" — a book he hopes will lead to the downfall of the Amin regime and enable him to return home.

Before Kyemba's defection from the southern African nation of 11 million in May of this year, the world only had vague notions of the Ugandan ordeal. Because the reports were written mostly by white Western journalists, Amin was able to dismiss them as "imperialist propaganda," Kyemba said.

BUT NOT NOW. Kyemba brought with him stories of Amin's atrocities, which already are old news. In his book, Kyemba vividly details the horror stories:

- Thousands of bodies of Amin victims are dumped into the Nile so the crocodiles will eat them. However, there are more bodies than crocodiles, and the dead litter the banks downstream.
- Amin's men dragged Dora Bloch out of her hospital bed and killed her in retaliation for the Israeli raid on Entebbe airport to free hostages held by Palestinian terrorists. Mrs. Bloch had been accidently left behind in the rescue. Amin's men dumped her body in woods outside Kampala.
- The archbishop of Uganda and two high ministers were riddled with bullets by Amin's henchmen. They did not die in an automobile accident as Amin claimed.
- Two American freelance journalists, Robert Siedle and Nicholas Stroh, son of the Detroit brewer, were murdered in July, 1971 when they asked too many questions. Their bodies were dumped into a river.

The list of atrocities and the names of the victims are endless. Yet much about Amin and how re retains his power is a mystery to those in the West.

Kyemba tried to explain.

Amin thrives on praise and attention. He surrounds himself with those who lavish it upon him.

"You must praise him, compliment him. You must tell him he is doing a good job," Kyemba said. "You survive around him by telling him things he can do to get world attention. Those are the kinds of things that are given him."

His only allies are a band of 15,000 mercenaries from southern Sudan who ride roughshod over the army and the civilian population. The mercenaries remain loyal because he lavishes goods on them and permits them to pillage the country and its citizens. Without that loot, Amin would have no backers.

AMIN AND HIS soldiers are ignorant men "who know only how to use a gun," Kyemba said. Because Amin is so uneducated, he hates the intellectual and cultural elite of the country. That is why he has systematically murdered every prominent professional person, or at least driven them from Uganda. He has so completely reduced the ranks of trained professionals, that Kyemba fears there will be no competent leaders left to rule after Amin is deposed.

As if the murders are not enough, Amin must humiliate his victims even in death, Kyemba said. He said, "Amin is the most superstitious man I know." That superstition has led Amin to the acts of cannibalism and blood tasting that have become famous.

Amin is a member of the Kakwa tribe, which believes by tasting the blood of slain enemies the dead's spirits will be rendered harmless.

When the bodies of prominent victims are brought into a morgue in Kampala, Amin asks to be left alone inside with them.

"Hardly any Ugandan doubts that Amin, quite literally, has a taste for blood," Kyemba said.

BUT THE CANNIBALISM to which Amin has admitted and the mutilation of bodies is "very un-African," Kyemba said.

Henry Kyemba. . .Amin brutal, not mad.

"It is one thing to taste the blood of a victim, as Amin's tribe does," he said. "But it is another to open a man up and cut out his liver, or store his head inside the refrigerator as Amin has done. He will do it as a means to humiliate people and show his power. He will do it if it means he will be in power one day longer."

But Amin is not a madman? Brutal, but not mad, Kyemba says.

If Amin is not mad, then he can be held responsible for what he has done. Kyemba believes it is only a matter of time before the Amin regime collapses. There will be a day of reckoning for "Big Daddy."

But when that happens will depend on the actions of Britain, the United States and the Arab oil countries. All contribute to Amin's power by remaining active trading partners with Uganda.

The United States is Uganda's biggest coffee customer, and the Arabs, particularly Libya, provide much of the cash Amin needs. Britain regularly sells consumer goods to Amin — "whiskey" runs as Kyemba calls them — which Amin gives to his thugs to keep them loyal.

If these countries would cut off the trade, Amin would fall from power. Yet, Kyemba says, these countries have not done so because black African nations have not unanimously condemned Amin. Without that, trade will go on and so will Amin.

WHEN THE KILLERS are removed from power, and justice prevails again, where will Kyemba be? Will he have charges to answer?

Although he now condemns Amin, he served him for five years — through the killings and the plundering. He was the last of Amin's original ministers to leave.

Kyemba knew about the murders — as did many Ugandans — as early as 1972. He stayed on even after Amin ordered Kyemba's brother killed. He stayed on even though the most respectable of Uganda's citizens were fleeing. Why?

"I felt I could have an impact if I stayed. For me to leave Uganda, I would have to decide whether I could play a better role from within or from the outside. I decided it was better if I worked from within."

Kyemba said he realized this year — after the murder of the Ugandan archbishop that there was no hope. Kyemba said his own murder was being plotted.

"I have never regretted that I stayed on to be a witness to what was happening," he said. "I saved quite a few lives, and I helped some friends. I won't have to justify my actions when Amin has gone."

Late recess means new try on gas bill accord today

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd kept the Senate in its third straight night session Thursday in a futile effort to work out a compromise on natural gas legislation. He ordered the senators back for another try Friday morning.

The West Virginia Democrat recessed the Senate at 10:27 p.m. CDT after he was unable to get two warring factions to agree to begin voting on major amendments to the bill.

Every proposal he made drew an objection from either those who want to deregulate gas prices or those wanting price controls.

BYRD FINALLY gave up and asked the leaders of both sides to join him in his office in the morning to try to work out an agreement.

"I think I have made a good faith effort to try to arrange an understanding as to when we could vote," he said after repeated rebuffs.

Tempers grew short as the Senate struggled to end the 10-day filibuster first started by opponents of deregulation.

After nine days of silence, Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, rose to charge that senators opposed to deregulation of gas prices were being "steamrollered" by the majority.

"I don't like the smell of it," Muskie shouted.

MUSKIE SAID he had long opposed filibusters "but I'm just as opposed to steamroller tactics as I am to dilatory tactics."

Muskie's ire was aroused by an effort to wipe out hundreds of amendments offered by the filibusterers by having them called up and ruled out of order one by one.

Sen. Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., who was in the chair, noted at one point that there were still 385 amendments left.

Senate leaders had succeeded in getting opponents of deregulation to suspend their filibuster temporarily Thursday morning so that a compromise plan could be brought to the floor.

That plan would extend existing federal price regulation but also allow ceilings to be raised higher than President Carter wants.

THE CATCH was that proponents of deregulation reserved the right to amend the compromise bill to restore deregulation provisions, and their opponents said they would resume their filibuster if that occurred.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, a leader of the anti-deregulation filibuster, told a reporter "all bets are off" on the compromise plan if any effort is made to add deregulation provisions.

After the Senate brought Democratic Leader Robert Byrd's compromise to the floor by voice vote, Sen. Russell Long, D-La., took charge.

Long's tactic was to rob Metzenbaum and his ally, Democrat James Abdurezk of South Dakota, of the means to revive their filibuster by bringing up all the delaying amendments they had been keeping in reserve and disposing of them by quick voice votes.

Abdurezk tried to stall by demanding time-consuming roll call votes, but his tired and groggy colleagues refused to allow it.

LONG ALSO ignored Abourezk's challenge to call up the central amendment providing for deregulation of new gas in the heart of the dispute.

"If the definition of a filibuster is 'an act of piracy,' then I don't want to be a gentleman doing business with pirates," Long said at one point. "I have proved my talent as a filibusterer.

"If the other guy wants to be a poor loser, then I want to be a poor loser," Long said, waving his arms in a Senate that sat silent except for some chuckles.

Earlier, when Byrd's compromise seemed as though it might carry the day, Abourezk and Metzenbaum said they would vote for it "with reluctance, but we are interested in ending the impasse."

Harris Bank pitchkid to star in new TV show

- Nine-year-old Gary Coleman of Zion, who's best known for peddling "Hubert" dolls for the Harris Bank on television, will be going to Los Angeles this fall to star in Norman Lear's 1970s version of "The Little Rascals." The child actor got his start in show business four years ago when he handwrote a letter to Montgomery Ward officials asking whether they could use a little boy in their store fashion shows.

All India Radio quoted an expedition spokesman as saying "nature has defeated us." The spokesman said the expedition was abandoned because its three jet-powered boats "could not cross a 10-foot fall at the joining of the rivers Alaknanda and Mandakini" located at the height of about 4,000 feet. It was the expedition's goal to go beyond the rivers to where they merge into the Ganges River.

Swigert said their perspectives would alter drastically if they saw the earth as he saw it during reentry April 17, 1970. "You wouldn't see any boundaries between nations," he said. "And there aren't any races and there are no different religions or political views."

We were strangers: ex-resident

by JOHN LAMPINEN

After five years, the memories don't haunt Willard F. Williamson and his family.

They have put the incident behind them. They have moved away. They rarely think about it.

But there are reminders.

Like Wednesday night. When someone burned a cross in front of a house owned by David Ryan, a black man who has lived at 1150 Countryside in the Longmeadows South subdivision of Hanover Park for two weeks.

"PREJUDICE AND bias are still pretty much with us," Williamson said Thursday. "The incident doesn't surprise me. I'm saddened by it, but it doesn't surprise me."

Williamson is white.

But he knows a lot about prejudice.

In 1972, he and his wife decided the kitchen in their Schaumburg home was too small and there was no place for the children to play. So they put a down payment on a fashionable one-level home in the Greenbrook subdivisin of Hanover Park and prepared to move in.

There was just one problem. Many of the neighbors did not want the Williamsons. They had an 11-month-old adopted daughter named Joy.

She was black.

BEFORE THEY had even moved in, the Williamsons began getting midnight phone calls. At one point, a group of the neighbors confronted them and told them "in no uncertain terms" that they weren't wanted.

And then, one night in April, it happened: the burning cross on the lawn.

actions of the people around here, but the others don't get involved.

"To me, this is the unfriendliest neighborhood I've ever been in. I guess they're afraid of us. I don't know why."

Ryan, 26, a railroad conductor, is not afraid. He said he's "a little concerned" about his wife and children, but he's not planning to move.

But there's nothing to keep him in Hanover Park either.

"Nobody wants to get involved," he said. "When you live in a community, when you want to become part of a community — and I'm not saying that I do — you've got to share each other's problems to make it grow."

Looking back on it, Williamson said he doesn't blame Hanover Park. It could have happened in Schaumburg, Elgin or anywhere else.

"We just happened to be in the wrong place at the wrong time," he said.

The family had not moved into the house yet, and there was a time when they considered dissolving the transaction. But it became a matter of principle.

"WE HAD COMMITTED ourselves," Williamson recalled. "Not just when we got the house, but when we adopted Joy. We committed ourselves. We couldn't back down."

There always was a tension.

"While we lived there," Williamson said, "we were strangers in a strange land. It was like living in an empty lot."

Things could haave been different, he believes, and he concedes that his family was part of the reason they weren't. They made no attempt to smooth things over with those who had attacked them. After all that had happened, it was a difficult thing to do.

So they stayed three years. Joy grew, and although she wasn't particularly conscious of the prejudice, there were occasionals signs she eventually would recognize. Little things, such as the times children in the neighborhood had parties and she wasn't invited.

TWO YEARS AGO, they moved to Elgin. It could have just as easily been another part of Hanover Park, Williamson says, it just turned out that it was Elgin instead.

But still, there are occasional slights to a black child raised by white parents and she is beginning to sense it.

"We hear comments that she would like to be white," Williamson said. "As much as we tell her that black is beautiful, we hear them."

There are always reminders.

Food stamp reforms may eliminate some families

Low-income families in the Northwest suburbs may suffer as a result of new food stamp reforms signed into law Thursday by President Carter.

Tighter eligibility requirements could eliminate families at or above federal poverty guidelines who previously have been able to get food stamps.

Nationally, 1.5 million of the current 16.2 million persons are expected to be dropped, even though the reforms are expected to bring an estimated 3 million new recipients into the $5.6 billion food stamp program.

"Poverty in the Northwest suburbs is relative. A family might be just above the poverty line nationally but below the poverty line in terms of what it costs to live in this area," said Michael Raimondi, director of the Northwest Opportunity Center.

Raimondi said he would have to study the new regulations to determine in detail how low-income families in the Northwest suburbs will be affected.

THE FOOD STAMP program was extended for four years as a part of an omnibus $10.5 billion farm bill Carter once threatened to veto as too expensive.

"In the last 40 years there never has been such a far-reaching and important piece of legislature passed relating to American agriculture," Carter said.

In return for accepting crop supports higher than he wanted, Carter won the food stamp reforms he wanted.

The bill represented a "great step forward" in overhauling the stamp program, he said.

The new law eliminates the requirements that participants buy stamps. It also authorizes a test in 14 areas of a "workfare" program under which some able-bodied stamp recipients would have to earn their free stamps by working on public service jobs.

Target prices and loan rates for wheat, corn, rice and cotton are raised by the bill.

Other provisions call for expanded research programs in solar energy and human nutrition and the "food for peace" foreign aid program.

Fiery engine forces emergency landing

A chartered Capital Airlines DC8 with 190 persons aboard and one of its engines in flames made an emergency landing Thursday at Greater Peoria Airport, authorities said. About 20 persons were slightly injured during the evacuation. None were immediately admitted to hospitals. Federal Aviation Administration officials said the plane took off from the airport, bound for Las Vegas, at about 11:10 a.m and the pilot declared an emergency only nine minutes later. The plane's No. 1 engine was on fire. Firefighting units surrounded the landing strip where the plane landed and extinguished the fire while the 182 passengers and eight crew members evacuated the craft by sliding down emergency chutes.

Radioactive fallout slight in state

The Illinois Public Health Dept. said Thursday the radioactive fallout from last week's atomic explosion in China only slightly affected Illinois. Mary Huck, a department spokeswoman, said a cloud containing radioactive particles from the explosion passed over the state last week. She said tests were taken in six counties on air, water, ground and milk, and all results were "pretty much the same. They were slightly above normal . . . but not much."

None of the levels were hazardous and all milk, water and crops are safe to consume, she said. However, she said the cloud was expected to pass over the state again this weekend, so the tests will be taken again. The tests were taken in Madison, DuPage, Rock Island, Williamson, Peoria and Sangamon counties.

Legislator entitled to back pay

Former Decatur state Rep. A. Webber Borchers, whose theft and official misconduct conviction was overturned last week, is entitled to legislative pay for his year out of office, Comptroller Michael Bakalis said Thursday. But Bakalis said there is no appropriation available to pay the $20,000 yearly salary Borchers left behind when he had to vacate his seat in December 1975.

Raids bring gypsy 'seers' misfortune

Chicago gypsies' crystal balls gave them a bum steer Thursday. Otherwise, 61 persons might have been able to dodge arrest in a police crackdown on "gypsy fortune tellers" on the city's South and Southwest Sides. Approximately 40 raids were prompted by complaints from people "who wind up getting ripped off in a con game," a police spokesman said. The persons arrested were charged with a misdemeanor violation of a city ordinance forbidding advertisement of promises to tell the future, "restore lost love or give advice." Conviction brings a fine of $25 to $100.

Law delays trip down the aisle

Changes in the Illinois marriage law will require couples to wait three days before marrying after obtaining a license, Cook County Clerk Stanley T. Kusper Jr. said Thursday. Kusper said two bills, signed by Gov. James R. Thompson Thursday, establish the waiting period and boost the license fee from $10 to $15. The waiting period becomes effective Saturday, but to avoid inconvenience it can be waived by the Cook County Circuit Court during the first half of October. Kusper said the increase in license fees will boost the county's general fund by as much as $250,000.

Fulle sentence reduction denied

The five-year prison sentence of former Cook County Comr. Floyd T. Fulle of Des Plaines will not be reduced. U.S. District Judge Bernard M. Decker Thursday denied a request by Fulle to cut his prison term because of financial troubles. Fulle, 56, was convicted in December 1975 of extortion, income tax fraud and perjury and began serving his sentence Jan. 28. He sought the sentence reduction, saying his public relations firm was failing and he had to sell his newspaper because of financial troubles.

Convicted molester sentenced

A six-month sentence in the Vandalia state correctional facility Thursday was ordered for a former Wood Dale police sergeant for contributing to the sexual delinquency of a minor. Robert C. Sample, 35, of 255 Gay St., Wood Dale, also was placed on two year's probation in McHenry County Circuit Court. He pleaded guilty to the charge in July. Sample was arrested for molesting a boy in a Crystal Lake motel while members of a scout troop, of which he was a leader, were spending the weekend at a ski resort. He was suspended from the suburb's police force in March after he was indicted by the grand jury.

Underpass rivals petition support

Two petition drives have been started in Arlington Heights by businessmen opposed to the underpass proposed for Arlington Heights Road at the Chicago and North Western ry. tracks.

Members of the Arlington Heights Chamber of Commerce voted unanimously this week to oppose the underpass plan and authorized a petition drive among businessmen, Edmund Pawelko, chamber president, said.

"Nonchamber members are joining the chamber on this for a unified effort. We want to get a unified voice from north, south, east, west and other concerned businessmen," Pawelko said.

THE PETITIONS probably will be presented to the Arlington Heights Village Board Oct. 17 when the underpass plan tentatively is sscheduled for discussion, Paweklo said.

The other petition drive was begun by Ralph Windheim, 318 S. Evergreen Ave., who owns the Community Camera Store at 114 N. Evergreen Ave.

Windheim said he began circulating petitions among his neighbors because the proposed detour route during construction of an underpass would take Arlington Heights Road traffic through his neighborhood.

Copies of Windheim's petition also have been posted near cash registers at several downtown stores.

Signers of the petition are "irrevocably opposed" to the underpass proposal.

"NOT ONLY DO we feel it will be very difficult to support our local businesses during such a time, but we also strongly resent the fact that our residential area will be subjected to greatly increased detour traffic during this construction. There are numerous small children in this area, all of whom use Grove or South streets to go either to Park or South schools," the petition states.

Windheim submitted petitions with about 75 signatures to village officials Thursday so they will be come part of the record of the public hearing on the underpass conducted Sept. 20.

"Most people weren't aware the detour would go right by their houses. For two years, we'll have a major highway going by," Windheim said.

The petition drafted by Windheim is being signed by many customers of stores where it is posted, Robert Russow, manager of Hagenbring's Dept. Store, said.

"Most people are very willing to sign it. They know about the underpass and they are opposed to it," Russo said.

The underpass plan recommended by the engineering consultant firm of Metcalf & Eddy Inc. of Des Plaines, called for the depression of Arlington Heights Road under the railway tracks with Northwest Highway also depressed to the same level as Arlington Heights Road.

THE 1975 COST estimate for the recommended plan is $5.6 million. If the village board decides fairly soon to proceed with the underpass, the village is almost assured of getting 70 per cent funding from the federal government, village officials say.

The main objection to the plan has been that the central business district will suffer because the underpass will mean closing the Evergreen Avenue railway crossing as well as prohibiting the access of Wing and Davis streets to Arlington Heights Road.

Windheim's petitions are the first objections to the proposed detour routes.

The detours proposed by Metcalf & Eddy call for southbound Arlington Heights Road traffic to go west on Eastman Street to Vail Avenue, south on Vail to Grove Street, and east on Grove to Arlington Heights Road.

The detour proposed for northbound traffic is for vehicles to go west on South Street and Dunton Avenue, north on Dunton to Eastman Street, and east on Eastman to Arlington Heights Road.

"One of the worst things you can do is overbuild," said Jerry Gottlieb, in an attempt to sell the village board on his team's proposal for a center with only 25,000 square feet of retail space.

"WE FEEL IT would be better to build it on an incremental basis." Gottlieb said. "You should establish the center's credibility first, then it will be easier to build extensions," he said.

The Des Plaines Superblock project is the only downtown development the Gottlieb team has built.

The Crane team has been involved in the planning and construction of more than 20 shopping malls, including downtown projects in Green Bay, Wis.; Wooster, Mass.; Oshkosh, Wis.; Cedar Rapids, Iowa; Omaha, Neb., and Oklahoma City, Okla.

Village Planner Joseph Kesler said he favored construction of a project with at least 100,000 square feet of retail space, but Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson said he would prefer to see a smaller development.

Village trustees, who will make the final decision, did not indicate a preference at Thursday's meeting.

Citizens Utilities to receive lake water

Citizens Utilities Co., serving more than 6,300 households in Mount Prospect and Prospect Heights, has been added to the list of those to receive Lake Michigan water.

Wheeling, however, will lose its second bid to get lake water when the Illinois Dept. of Transportation today announces its ruling on appeals filed by those objecting to the IDOT's April water allocation.

The ruling resulted in 12 increased allocations, two decreases and the addition of Citizens Utilities.

BOTH WHEELING and Citizens Utilities were among the 51 applicants who appealed the April allocation. That allocation earmarked lake water for 18 towns, including eight Northwest suburbs, that now rely on dwindling groundwater supplies.

In Wheeling's case, the state upheld its earlier decision that the village had ample ground water to serve its population through the year 2010.

Citizens Utilities was granted an allocation because of an error in the original allocation order. "We thought Wheeling and Mount Prospect had applied for that water, but they hadn't," a spokesman said.

The water company serves the northeast portion of Mount Prospect, portions of Prospect Heights and unincorporated Wheeling Township. It also provides water to the Waycinden Park area near Des Plaines.

THE STATE said Citizens Utilities can begin using lake water as early as 1979 if it has a way to get the water to its customers. In 1979 it will be entitled to 2.801 cubic feet per second, with that amount increasing to 2.908 in 1980.

The revised allocation order now goes to the lake County Circuit Court where legal challenges have delayed implementation of the order.

"We are currently scheduled to come before Judge VanDeusen Oct. 18," said Don Vonnahme, acting director of IDOT's Division of Water Resources.

Vonnahme said it is important the judge remove a stay of execution placed on the April allocation order.

"If we continue to delay, no one can do any definite planning," Vonnahme said, noting communities that need the water want to begin pipeline construction as soon as possible.

THE EIGHT Northwest suburban communities receiving lake water allocations in the April order include Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Rolling Meadows, Elk Grove Village, Mount Prospect, Palatine and Buffalo Grove. All currently are developing plans for a pipeline to the area.

IDOT Sec. John Kramer said many parties may be unhappy with the re-

"There will always be more evivised order.

dence, and no order by the department will ever be acceptable to all the parties," Kramer said. "However, a systematic allocation based on proven needs must be implemented now to prevent immediate water shortages in certain areas of the region."

Once the order is accepted by the court, the state will be able to consider new requests for water based on changed circumstances or new evidence. The state also is working to change the formula that limits Illinois' diversion from the lake to 3,200 cubic feet per second.

THE DIVERSION limit, set by the U.S. Supreme Court, currently requires the state to include in that diversion the maximum runoff that would have flowed into the lake if the Chicago River had not been reversed. The state wants to substitute the average storm runoff for that figure.

Influenza, measles and polio are still dreaded diseases. You should be aware of how you and your family should be protected.

INFLUENZA RECOMMENDATIONS VARY
For high risk people (consult your doctor to determine risk) it is recommended that an influenza shot should be given every year. Other individuals should make their own decisions. In many industries influenza shots are considered helpful in keeping absenteeism down.

The Salk vaccine requires an initial three dose schedule to be followed by periodic boosters. The Sabin vaccine is long term or even lifetime. Two in first year of life, one in the third year of life and then one at entry into school is considered permanent protection.

MEASLES PROTECTION IS FOR A LIFETIME
The measles vaccine now available is exceptionally good. Any individual fifteen months and above who has not had a natural case of the measles can be protected for life with just one dose.

Adventures of your Garbageman

About That Brush Length, Again

Surely, at least 90% of residents know the reason why bundles of discarded brush should be no longer than 5 feet in length. But periodically, we like to explain this for the benefit of newcomers.

As most residents know, it's not because we are "fussy". There is a common-sense reason: The 5-feet length fits the width of garbage trucks. Anything longer than 5 feet must be "chopped off" to fit.

A really thick limb that is too long will often wreck the truck's "hopper" (compacting blade) and put the truck out of commission for at least a day.

With lighter brush that is too wide, the "hopper" will chop it off neatly . . . BUT the broken-off ends will then litter the street and the parkway.

So (as every so often) we ask again: Please make sure that discarded brush does not measure over 5 feet in length. If it's longer, our driver will probably have to leave it. And, thank you again.

No quick SALT agreement: Carter

President Carter said Thursday he sees no immediate prospect of concluding a strategic arms agreement with the Soviets despite Moscow's "flexible" new bargaining attitude. At a news conference, Carter also said the United Sttes will begin to "meet with and work with" the Palestine Liberation Organization once it acknowledges Israel's right to exist — but said that, even then, he could not guarantee the PLO a direct role in Middle East peace talks.

He also warned the public another energy crisis may be "imminent" and encouraged Americans to put pressure on the Senate to pass his proposed national energy program. He expressed confidence the senators will approve his proposals once they realize "they have their own reputations to protect." On prospects for a Salt II agreement with the Soviets replacing the one that expires Monday, Carter said there are no grounds to expect a sudden, dramatic breakthrough even though the Soviets have been showing signs of willingness to get the long-stalled negotiations moving.

On the Palestinian issue, Carter said "We have no national position on exactly who should represent the Palestinians or exactly how the Arab delegation should be organized," stressing that his goal was still to find some formula acceptable to everyone.

Court OKs N.Y. Concorde landings

Noting "the hour is at hand," the U.S. 2nd Circuit Court of Appeals Thursday gave its approval to a tryout of the Anglo-French supersonic Concorde jet at New York's Kennedy Airport. The three-judge court agreed with a lower court decision to lift the ban imposed 18 months ago on the operations of the jet at Kennedy by the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, which operates the airport. British Airways welcomed the decision and said it could begin commercial service with Air France "perhaps around the second half of November." The two airlines are joint sponsors of the plane.

House backs neutron bomb study

The House Thursday overwhelmingly endorsed research into a neutron weapon that kills people but does not destroy property. The decision came on a 297-109 defeat of an amendment that would have banned such research by the Energy Research and Development Administration. The House went on to pass the ERDA bill, 330-78, and sent it to the Senate. President Carter asked for the research authority, stating he would decide after further study whether to propose development of the weapon.

Democrats who stood together in opposition to such past armament controversies as the B-1 bomber split on the neutron issue with 176 voting against the amendment authoried by Rep. Theodore Weiss, D-N.Y. Republicans were in nearly solid opposition to Weiss, with only 10 voting in his favor. The weapon can be developed as a warhead on an artillery shell or carried as a bomb.

The world

Soviet space station in orbit

The Soviet Union Thursday fired a space station into orbit, prompting speculation that the Russians planned a new manned space flight to coincide with the 20th anniversary of the first Sputnik next week. The new space station, Salyut 6, replaces the Salyut 5 station which fell out of orbit and burned up on re-entry August 8 after less than 14 months in space. Launching of the new Salyut fueled speculation that the Soviets may be preparing another manned orbital flight in connection with the 20th anniversary of the Soviet space program Oct. 4 or the Nov. 7 celebrations of the 60th anniversary of the Russian revolution.

Iran admits cholera epidemic

Iran Thursday admitted a "cholera type" disease has reached epidemic proportions in the Tehran area, afflicting nearly 1,500 persons and killing 47. A Health Ministry statement said the disease, called El Tor, also had hit other parts of the country. It said 1,492 cases had been confirmed in the capital and a nearby town.

Progress in treating child leukemia told

NEW YORK (UPI) — Cancer researchers Thursday reported major progress in treating the most common form of childhood leukemia. During the past 15 years therapy has reached the point where doctors cautiously talk of cures in some cases.

"The former attitude of pessimism and fatalism has been replaced by a note of hope and optimism," said Dr. Donald Pinkel, of the Medical College of Wisconsin, at a national conference on leukemias and lymphomas.

He said acute lymphocytic leukemia, the type of cancer of the blood-forming tissues that accounts for most leukemia in children, was almost uniformly fatal 20 or 30 years ago. It strikes about 1,500 American youngsters annually.

NOW, MORE THAN half of children with the disease who are treated with modern techniques using powerful drugs and radiation are alive and well and free of all evidence of leukemia for periods up to 10 years.

Dr. Joseph Simone of Stanford University, said some of his patients at St. Jude Children's Research Hospital in Memphis, which he recently left to go to Stanford, have gone through high school and college and several have married and produced normal offspring.

"It is no longer controversial to state that a significant proportion of children with acute lymphocytic leukemia can attain long-term, leukemia-free survival and, possibly, cure," Simone said.

Specialists emphasized, however, that much has yet to be learned about leukemia and why it is that some patients fail to respond significantly to the latest forms of treatment. The drugs and radiation used to treat leukemic children also produce adverse side effects and occasionally permanent harm.

PINKEL SAID it was important that children with leukemia receive treatment in major cancer centers which are aware of recent developments and which can deal with drug reactions.

Dr. Vincent DeVita, director of cancer treatment at the National Cancer Institute in Washington, said one of the most significant results of the advances in treating childhood leukemia is that they demonstrate "that we in fact can cure cancer with drugs."

He said leukemia is serving as the "stalking horse" for treating other, more common forms of cancer with combinations of anticancer agents.

DeVita said he uses the term "cure" in cases where patients are free of apparent disease after long periods of time even though there is no guarantee that it might not return some day.

Dr. David Galton, of the University of London, said it would be "splitting hairs" to say that those patients are not cured.

receive only $12,958 after six years and $14,662 after nine.

"I think one of the reasons we are beginning to find higher salaries in the suburbs at the top end of the schedules is suburban school districts have traditionally put a higher emphasis on attainment of a higher degree," said David Tomchek, area Illinois Education Assn. representative.

Chicago's teachers receive greater pay rewards at lower levels of additional education, and the net result is they are not as encouraged to continue their eductions, Tomchek said.

But in the Northwest suburban high school districts, top salaries are considerably higher than Chicago's.

TOP PAY FOR A Chicago teacher is $23,775 with a doctorate degree and 15 years' experience.

High School Dist. 207 teachers can receive $25,400 after 20 years, with a master's and considerably more education, or a doctorate.

Top pay in High School Dist. 211 is $24,438, while the teacher receiving the highest salary in High School Dist. 214 would get $25,586 — all higher than in Chicago.

The average 1977-78 Chicago teacher's salary is $17,195 with a bachelor's degree and eight years' experience. But Northwest suburban averages may be higher because suburban teaching staffs stay longer, said an IEA spokesman, Clay Marquardt.

Suburban districts also are finding that the oversupply of teachers enables them to have lower base pays, but concentrate on rewarding teachers who stay on, teacher representatives say.

Jom Modec, president of the Arlington Teacher's Assn. in Arlington Heights Dist. 25, estimated that teacher turnover used to be around about 10 per cent, but now only 20 to 25 teachers leave each year.

No quick SALT agreement: Carter

President Carter said Thursday he sees no immediate prospect of concluding a strategic arms agreement with the Soviets despite Moscow's "flexible" new bargaining attitude. At a news conference, Carter also said the United Sttes will begin to "meet with and work with" the Palestine Liberation Organization once it acknowledges Israel's right to exist — but said that, even then, he could not guarantee the PLO a direct role in Middle East peace talks.

He also warned the public another energy crisis may be "imminent" and encouraged Americans to put pressure on the Senate to pass his proposed national energy program. He expressed confidence the senators will approve his proposals once they realize "they have their own reputations to protect." On prospects for a Salt II agreement with the Soviets replacing the one that expires Monday, Carter said there are no grounds to expect a sudden, dramatic breakthrough even though the Soviets have been showing signs of willingness to get the long-stalled negotiations moving.

On the Palestinian issue, Carter said "We have no national position on exactly who should represent the Palestinians or exactly how the Arab delegation should be organized," stressing that his goal was still to find some formula acceptable to everyone.

Court OKs N.Y. Concorde landings

Noting "the hour is at hand," the U.S. 2nd Circuit Court of Appeals Thursday gave its approval to a tryout of the Anglo-French supersonic Concorde jet at New York's Kennedy Airport. The three-judge court agreed with a lower court decision to lift the ban imposed 18 months ago on the operations of the jet at Kennedy by the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, which operates the airport. British Airways welcomed the decision and said it could begin commercial service with Air France "perhaps around the second half of November." The two airlines are joint sponsors of the plane.

House backs neutron bomb study

The House Thursday overwhelmingly endorsed research into a neutron weapon that kills people but does not destroy property. The decision came on a 297-109 defeat of an amendment that would have banned such research by the Energy Research and Development Administration. The House went on to pass the ERDA bill, 330-78, and sent it to the Senate. President Carter asked for the research authority, stating he would decide after further study whether to propose development of the weapon.

Democrats who stood together in opposition to such past armament controversies as the B-1 bomber split on the neutron issue with 176 voting against the amendment authoried by Rep. Theodore Weiss, D-N.Y. Republicans were in nearly solid opposition to Weiss, with only 10 voting in his favor. The weapon can be developed as a warhead on an artillery shell or carried as a bomb.

Soviet space station in orbit

The Soviet Union Thursday fired a space station into orbit, prompting speculation that the Russians planned a new manned space flight to coincide with the 20th anniversary of the first Sputnik next week. The new space station, Salyut 6, replaces the Salyut 5 station which fell out of orbit and burned up on re-entry August 8 after less than 14 months in space. Launching of the new Salyut fueled speculation that the Soviets may be preparing another manned orbital flight in connection with the 20th anniversary of the Soviet space program Oct. 4 or the Nov. 7 celebrations of the 60th anniversary of the Russian revolution.

Iran admits cholera epidemic

Iran Thursday admitted a "cholera type" disease has reached epidemic proportions in the Tehran area, afflicting nearly 1,500 persons and killing 47. A Health Ministry statement said the disease, called El Tor, also had hit other parts of the country. It said 1,492 cases had been confirmed in the capital and a nearby town.

Progress in treating child leukemia told

NEW YORK (UPI) — Cancer researchers Thursday reported major progress in treating the most common form of childhood leukemia. During the past 15 years therapy has reached the point where doctors cautiously talk of cures in some cases.

"The former attitude of pessimism and fatalism has been replaced by a note of hope and optimism," said Dr. Donald Pinkel, of the Medical College of Wisconsin, at a national conference on leukemias and lymphomas.

He said acute lymphocytic leukemia, the type of cancer of the blood-forming tissues that accounts for most leukemia in children, was almost uniformly fatal 20 or 30 years ago. It strikes about 1,500 American youngsters annually.

NOW, MORE THAN half of children with the disease who are treated with modern techniques using powerful drugs and radiation are alive and well and free of all evidence of leukemia for periods up to 10 years.

Dr. Joseph Simone of Stanford University, said some of his patients at St. Jude Children's Research Hospital in Memphis, which he recently left to go to Stanford, have gone through high school and college and several have married and produced normal offspring.

"It is no longer controversial to state that a significant proportion of children with acute lymphocytic leukemia can attain long-term, leukemia-free survival and, possibly, cure," Simone said.

Specialists emphasized, however, that much has yet to be learned about leukemia and why it is that some patients fail to respond significantly to the latest forms of treatment. The drugs and radiation used to treat leukemic children also produce adverse side effects and occasionally permanent harm.

PINKEL SAID it was important that children with leukemia receive treatment in major cancer centers which are aware of recent developments and which can deal with drug reactions.

Dr. Vincent DeVita, director of cancer treatment at the National Cancer Institute in Washington, said one of the most significant results of the advances in treating childhood leukemia is that they demonstrate "that we in fact can cure cancer with drugs."

He said leukemia is serving as the "stalking horse" for treating other, more common forms of cancer with combinations of anticancer agents.

DeVita said he uses the term "cure" in cases where patients are free of apparent disease after long periods of time even though there is no guarantee that it might not return some day.

Dr. David Galton, of the University of London, said it would be "splitting hairs" to say that those patients are not cured.

Colleges coming to grips with part-timers' demands

by RENA WISH COHEN

It's a prospect that would send shudders down the spine of any self-respecting community college official: the idea that part-time instructors might band together and demand pay on a scale equal to full-time faculty's as well as tenure rights and a slew of fringe benefits.

At Harper College, it would mean a mass uprising by some 550 part-time instructors, not to mention having to deal with a full-time unionized teaching force of about 200.

And at Oakton Community College, it would hit as many as 600 part-timers in continuing education classes plus 180 part-time instructors in credit courses — next to which the 123-member full-time faculty is a drop in the bucket.

"IT'S A MOVEMENT that hasn't reached Illinois yet. Or many other places, for that matter.

But in California, 24 lawsuits have been filed over the issue. And two of them, both directed against the Los Angeles Community College District, could cost the district between $30 million and $40 million.

It puts community college officials in a tough spot.

"These (part-time) people are valuable," said Charles Falk, dean of continuing education at Harper College and one of the officials who attended a conference on the subject at the Arlington Park Hilton Thursday. "We couldn't run our program without them."

Harper and other community colleges use part-time people to meet the always-changing demands of their constituencies, to whom the fad might be yoga one semester and women's literature the next. And when the topic is nursing or real estate, the part-time instructor, who is employed full-time in the field, can bring classwork out of the theoretical into the practical.

BUT PART-TIME faculty receive no fringe benefits and are paid substantially less than full-time instructors. John Birkholz, vice president of academic affairs at Harper, said the highest paid part-time instructor might earn $900 for a three-hour course, while the average full-time faculty member would receive what amounts to $1,500 for the same work.

That kind of disparity has led to charges of exploitation in places such as California and in the ranks of teachers' unions, which also argue the lower part-time salaries undermine the professional standards of full-time faculty members.

But there is another problem — one that Falk himself has encountered in teaching one graduate business course a semester at Northern Illinois University, based in DeKalb.

"It's hard to have a sense of belonging when you only teach part-time," Falk said. "I can't go to Northern during the day and get to know the full-time faculty." And under those conditions, Falk said, it's difficult to find your mailbox, not to mention getting a handle on the philosophy of the college.

FALK SAID those problems of isolation are shared by the whole spectrum of part-time instructors — the people, like himself, who are employed full-time but get some "psychic rewards" out of an occasional teaching stint; the moonlighters who are in it for a little extra cash; the job-hunters who hope a part-time position might lead to better things; and the others who don't know exactly what they're looking for.

Institutions such as Harper are trying to come to grips with that isolation by holding information sessions with part-time faculty and trying to measure the needs, say, of an air conditioning repairman who is the best person to teach air conditioning repair but who may want some help in his classroom techniques.

Considerate? To a certain extent. But community college officials also hope that sort of tender loving care will nip any California-like militancy in the bud. Otherwise, the threat to their treasuries and their entire faculty structure could be immense.

Lobbying needs stronger rules

Whenever the legislature is in session, members of the Illinois General Assembly are deluged with lobbyists representing various special interest groups.

In addition to the lobbyists employed by business and labor groups, there is a substantial number of lobbyists who are paid by local governments with taxpayer's money.

Municipalities, park districts and school districts find it necessary to band together to pay lobbyists to look after their interests in Springfield. Some local governments belong to several organizations which hire lobbyists; still others employ their own "legislative liaisons" who lobby in Springfield.

Despite the fact the existence of tax-paid lobbyists is openly acknowledged, the laws regulating them and other lobbyists are weak and seldom enforced.

The state Lobbyist Registration Act requires lobbyists to register and report expenditures they make in an effort to influence legislation. However, of more than 430 lobbyists registered under the act, only 47 report expenditures.

In addition, there is no law requiring lobbyists employed by local units of government to make over-all budgets public. As a result, organizations such as the Illinois Assn. of School Administrators can decline to provide information on salaries of their employes.

What is clearly required is stricter enforcement of the present lobbyist registration law to ensure full disclosure of activities of all lobbyists, both private and public.

In addition, new laws are needed to extend the regulation of those lobbyists who are paid with public funds. Clearly, the public should have as much access to public lobbyists' records as they have to budgets of local governments who pay their salaries.

Some legislators have advocated going even further in regulating public lobbyists by prohibiting them from doing any more than providing information. State Sen. Roger Sommer, R-Pekin, for example, suggests that public-paid lobbyists shouldn't be buying dinner and drinks for legislators.

Sommer may have a point, but it is also true that local governments need effective representation in Springfield to prevent the legislature from enacting programs that end up costing local taxpayers money.

The important thing, at least for now, is to require disclosure of public lobbyists' activities. After that, the public and legislators can judge whether their methods should be restricted.

West Point needs humor

You WILL have a sense of humor. That's an order!

Sound absurd: Maybe, but it's no laughing matter at West Point.

A recent investigation headed by a panel of three Army generals has reached the conclusion that West Point is no longer a fun place. We didn't know it ever was.

The panel characterized West Point as having a "relatively humorless atmosphere" where "a certain grimness marks many of the cadets."

To add a little zip to West Point life, the committee recommends a winning football team, sex education courses and an easing of the traditional freshman hazing.

Whether those changes will bring some zest to the academy remains to be seen, but one thing remains certain: The next worse thing to power without honor is power without humor.

If those who are going to be our future military leaders can learn that, it will be an important part of their education.

Even though I feel the answer to both issues on Saturday's Mount Prospect Library referendum should be "Yes," I was still pleased to read The Daily Herald's editorial endorsing a "Yes" vote on the bond issue for books.

I agree with The Daily Herald's statement "The book bond program is a well thought out approach to improving the library's collection to make it more valuable to the community."

I would have to vigorously question the statement that the referendum on the tax rate is politically inspired to be used as lever against the village board.

In my judgment, we directors have judiciously operated as an elected independent board developing an operating budget that in my best judgment as an experienced businessman is prudent and minimal.

I think a careful examination of the actual budget items will confirm that in fact, the planning has been both conservative and cost efficient.

Samuel A. Hess
Finance Chairman
Mount Prospect
Library Board

THE MOUNT PROSPECT Public Library Board referendum, which is scheduled for Saturday, if approved by the voters, would saddle the village homeowners with more and more taxes.

The money is needed to bail out the new library from its financial mire, which in my opinion was created by the ineptness of the original planners. The library board and the leadership of the previous village administration should have provided for these needs when issuing the first bonds.

The referendum is in two parts. In the first part it is asking to increase the present tax rate of 15 cents to 28.4 cents — almost double — per $100 assessed valuation of property. This money would be used to support the operational budget. In the second part it asks the voters to approve a bond issue in the amount of $850,000 for the purchase of books and other materials.

Let's examine the first part. To be fair to yourself and the other residents as a whole, you must understand the ballot in terms of dollars. Get before you the 1975 and 1976 tax bills, and compare the assessed valuation of your property for those two years. Suppose the figure on the 1975 tax bill is $10,000. Multiply this figure by 15 per cent. The result will be $15, the amount you have been paying annually to maintain and operate the library. That is the old rate.

Now figure out the new rate of 28.4 per cent per $100 of assessed valuation. Use 1976 tax bill figure. Remember how much your 1976 taxes have skyrocketed; your assessed valuation figure may have risen from $10,000 to $12,500. Multiply this increased figure by 0.284 and divide the product by 100. The result is $35.50. This figure will be the amount you would have to pay in library taxes if the referendum is approved. Not "only about $11 more per year," as the "Citizens for the Library" tell you in their brochure, but $20.50 more per year. The larger your assessment figure, the more you will pay.

Now for the second part of the referendum. If approved, it would add another $8 to $12 to your library tax bill, or total of about $47 per year based on the above figures. And keep in mind that these figures will climb upward year by year.

If you want your taxes to skyrocket, vote YES, and if you want to keep your taxes in line, vote NO — on both issues on October 1.

Lorraine Meltzer
Mount Prospect

I NOTICED, while reading the Sept. 23 issue of The Daily Herald, that two Mount Prospect residents had written, opposing the proposed library referendum in that town. It has become obvious that the entire library issue has become a joke in Mount Prospect.

Why shouldn't Mount Prospect residents oppose referendums to properly equip their library? After all, why should they spend money when they can take full advantage of the services at the Arlington Heights library, one of the best in the state, for free?

It is after reading letters like these that I seriously think it is time that Arlington Heights Memorial Library's participation in the North Suburban Library System be reexamined. I realized this after listening to two patrons complain about the service they got one afternoon and then noticing their out-of-town library cards. Our "good neighbor" policy has gotten out of hand.

It is time that Arlington Heights residents refuse to pay the taxes to support a good library for everyone in the area to use, when the residents of Mount Prospect are just too cheap to properly equip their own.

I recommend that we say NO the next time a Mount Prospect resident tries to take advantage of our library.

Abortion issue draws their views

How thrilling to finally have a newspaper, The Daily Herald, that speaks to our immediate area of Hanover Park on a daily basis. For too long we've had to choose between an Elgin or Chicago paper.

However, I was totally appalled by your editorial of Sept. 19, "Thompson veto of abortion bill courageous act," I in no way see "courage" in speaking about the killing of human life. God could just as well choose to instill the soul of a genius in a public aid woman as well as a rich one. The answer lies in education and prevention of pregnancy in those less fortunate, not in "convenience killing."

Any newspaper whose aim is: "To fear God . . ."certainly must not be "telling the truth" because God gave us the Ten Commandments which proclaim "Thou shalt not kill." If you want to "make money," I suggest you change your pro-abortion stand.

Thank you for listening to me. I speak to you not only as a person who would like to subscribe to your paper but also as an angered adoptive parent who has experienced many unwanted miscarriages and finally two full-term pregnancies and Christian woman.

I also talk to you as the president of the Council of Catholic Women of St. Ansgar's Church. As Christian women, we believe in supporting life in all forms; especially the unborn, for they have no other protection except through responsible adults. I have never used my "power" as a president, for I believe in my leadership as a service. However, once again I state, I will "veto" your newspaper if you continue your pro-abortion stand.

Hoping I encourage new subscribers on your merits, rather than discourage them on your faults.

Sharon Ann Ceh
Hanover Park

WHEN THE Elk Grove Village Board meets to decide on the rezoning of the building to allow for an abortion clinic, they might also vote to change their name to Elk Grave.

Michael A. Dzurisin
Des Plaines

I READ Mr. Joseph Rosenberger's article in The Daily Herald which attacked the pro-life stand.

I disagree completely with him when he says that the entire anti-abortion movement is nothing but a frenzied attempt on the part of the Roman Catholic Church to impose its religious beliefs on all Americans.

To say that all life is to be held sacred and killing an unborn child is murder is not a purely Catholic viewpoint. It is not only God's law, but it has always been a view held by good Americans until recent years. In our pledge of allegiance, we say "one nation, under God." It was not Roman Catholics who did this. Our country has always believed in God's laws until now.

A woman may be free to do what she wants with her own body, but not when it denies the rights to another life, her unborn child.

Mrs. Frank Gineman

'Have a heart'

It's bad enough when "little people" are "eaten up" by progress, but now they're being "eaten up" by landscaping.

This letter is in reference to the story in the Sept. 5 Daily Herald about Hans Loeber, 72. Mr. Loeber is being evicted from his corner because Motorola feels his gas station and home are a "blight" on their 325-acre site. Now that Algonquin Road is all built-up with "Eater's Row" and all the other fine things that come with progress, who needs the little guy that was willing to serve people on the lonely road 20 years ago?

Come on Motorola — how much longer can a 72 year old man last as a "blight" on a corner so remote from your buildings that you must need binoculars to see the station. Can "Big Business" really be this insensitive to an old man who just wants to finish out his few remaining years doing what he knows how to do, and has nowhere else to go?

Mrs. Harriett Geudtner

Flo's rock met a bad $60 end

She is Bronx to the bone, a stately tough-talking tomato. Gladys Glad was billed by Florenz Ziegfeld as "the most beautiful woman in the world." She was designed to walk down staircases in feathers and rhinestones to stage center.

Men have chased Glad since she was 12. She didn't trust them then. She doesn't now. She walks her Park Avenue apartment alone, the drapes drawn against the sun, the green-tinted glasses softening the lines in an ageless face.

It seemed obvious that the most beautiful woman would marry the richest man. Glad fell in love with the first Broadway columnist, Mark Hellinger. He was jaded, jaunty, a dark, slick-haired man who rapped out sob stories with one pecking finger.

HE WARNED HER against the designs of all men except himself. Especially Florenz Ziegfeld. Mark said the impresario's habit was to seduce beauties with a gift of two dozen long-stemmed American beauties with a sparkling gem buried in the bouquet.

The new Follies tried out in Boston. It was lavish with beauty, sets and talent. Then it went to New Haven. And on to Bridgeport. It was still in Boston when Glad found the big bouquet on her dressing table.

Her heart, steeled against men, beat faster. The card said: "Love, Flo." Buried in the stems was a beautiful sapphire ring. It was real, and probably cost $6,000. Glad tried it on. "A real rock," she said.

The only way she could keep it was to hide it when her intended husband dashed up from Broadway in his lavender Kissel. She hid it. After that she had to hold two men off — Ziegfeld and Hellinger. Glad was a tough-talking feminist before she could spell the word.

IT WORKED FOR five weeks. He walked into her dressing room in New Haven one Friday night. She was fatigued. The ring was on her finger. "What's that, baby?" he said. The wheels spun swiftly. "Oh that," she said. "Some of the girls and I were shopping in Boston. I spotted it in a hockshop window. Cute, isn't it Mark?"

He nodded. "Take it off," he said. "It looks pretty good." "Don't waste your time," she snapped. "I picked it up for sixty bucks." He gentled the ring off. "That's a pretty good fake," he said admiringly.

"The setting is loose." He dropped it into his jacket pocket. "I'll get it fixed for you." "No you won't," she said. "I'll do my own fixing." He smoothed the dark blue shirt down beside the snowy tie. "What kind of a bum do you think I am," he said, "to let my best girl lose a stone?"

She was desperate. "It isn't worth fixing," she shouted. He shrugged. "It was pretty enough to catch your eye," he murmured. "Please! Mark!" He tried to kiss her. "You ain't gonna let sixty bucks come between us," he said.

HE PROMISED to have it back next Friday. He arrived. The ring didn't. She demanded her junk ring. He snapped his fingers. "Forgot. Next week for sure." It wasn't back the next week either. However, he had good news.

Mark said he was ashamed, driving her around in that silly roadster. The wind shattered her canary yellow coiffure. It slammed her eyelids shut. They were forced to shout to be heard. He had bought a Cadillac, just for her.

"I want that ring," she said softly. "I'm not kidding, Mark. It's mine." He apologized for forgetting it. The setting had been fixed two weeks ago. It was just his lousy memory.

Glad palmed one of her cynical smiles. "Well," she said, "you just hook up your lousy memory next Friday and bring that ring, or don't show up. I mean it, Mark." He promised.

THE FOLLOWING Friday, the Follies were playing Bridgeport. When the last curtain went down, Glad threaded her way through the cast to her dressing room. Hellinger was there, grinning and holding a small plush box.

Her hands wer shaking. "Thank you," she said, "for getting it fixed." She snapped the lid up. The platinum mounting was the same. The sapphire was a piece of cheap glass. "This," she said, lips trembling, "is not the same stone."

He kissed her cheek. "Kid," he said, "what kind of a cheapskate do you think I am? I don't want my best girl wearing a sixty-dollar stone. I told the jeweler to toss it in the garbage. This one set me back a hundred." . . .

THE MOUNT PROSPECT Public Library Board referendum, which is scheduled for Saturday, if approved by the voters, would saddle the village homeowners with more and more taxes.

The money is needed to bail out the new library from its financial mire, which in my opinion was created by the ineptness of the original planners. The library board and the leadership of the previous village administration should have provided for these needs when issuing the first bonds.

The referendum is in two parts. In the first part it is asking to increase the present tax rate of 15 cents to 28.4 cents — almost double — per $100 assessed valuation of property. This money would be used to support the operational budget. In the second part it asks the voters to approve a bond issue in the amount of $850,000 for the purchase of books and other materials.

Let's examine the first part. To be fair to yourself and the other residents as a whole, you must understand the ballot in terms of dollars. Get before you the 1975 and 1976 tax bills, and compare the assessed valuation of your property for those two years. Suppose the figure on the 1975 tax bill is $10,000. Multiply this figure by 15 per cent. The result will be $15, the amount you have been paying annually to maintain and operate the library. That is the old rate.

Now figure out the new rate of 28.4 per cent per $100 of assessed valuation. Use 1976 tax bill figure. Remember how much your 1976 taxes have skyrocketed; your assessed valuation figure may have risen from $10,000 to $12,500. Multiply this increased figure by 0.284 and divide the product by 100. The result is $35.50. This figure will be the amount you would have to pay in library taxes if the referendum is approved. Not "only about $11 more per year," as the "Citizens for the Library" tell you in their brochure, but $20.50 more per year. The larger your assessment figure, the more you will pay.

Now for the second part of the referendum. If approved, it would add another $8 to $12 to your library tax bill, or total of about $47 per year based on the above figures. And keep in mind that these figures will climb upward year by year.

If you want your taxes to skyrocket, vote YES, and if you want to keep your taxes in line, vote NO — on both issues on October 1.

Lorraine Meltzer
Mount Prospect

I NOTICED, while reading the Sept. 23 issue of The Daily Herald, that two Mount Prospect residents had written, opposing the proposed library referendum in that town. It has become obvious that the entire library issue has become a joke in Mount Prospect.

Why shouldn't Mount Prospect residents oppose referendums to properly equip their library? After all, why should they spend money when they can take full advantage of the services at the Arlington Heights library, one of the best in the state, for free?

It is after reading letters like these that I seriously think it is time that Arlington Heights Memorial Library's participation in the North Suburban Library System be reexamined. I realized this after listening to two patrons complain about the service they got one afternoon and then noticing their out-of-town library cards. Our "good neighbor" policy has gotten out of hand.

It is time that Arlington Heights residents refuse to pay the taxes to support a good library for everyone in the area to use, when the residents of Mount Prospect are just too cheap to properly equip their own.

I recommend that we say NO the next time a Mount Prospect resident tries to take advantage of our library.

Abortion issue draws their views

How thrilling to finally have a newspaper, The Daily Herald, that speaks to our immediate area of Hanover Park on a daily basis. For too long we've had to choose between an Elgin or Chicago paper.

However, I was totally appalled by your editorial of Sept. 19, "Thompson veto of abortion bill courageous act," I in no way see "courage" in speaking about the killing of human life. God could just as well choose to instill the soul of a genius in a public aid woman as well as a rich one. The answer lies in education and prevention of pregnancy in those less fortunate, not in "convenience killing."

Any newspaper whose aim is: "To fear God . . ."certainly must not be "telling the truth" because God gave us the Ten Commandments which proclaim "Thou shalt not kill." If you want to "make money," I suggest you change your pro-abortion stand.

Thank you for listening to me. I speak to you not only as a person who would like to subscribe to your paper but also as an angered adoptive parent who has experienced many unwanted miscarriages and finally two full-term pregnancies and Christian woman.

I also talk to you as the president of the Council of Catholic Women of St. Ansgar's Church. As Christian women, we believe in supporting life in all forms; especially the unborn, for they have no other protection except through responsible adults. I have never used my "power" as a president, for I believe in my leadership as a service. However, once again I state, I will "veto" your newspaper if you continue your pro-abortion stand.

Hoping I encourage new subscribers on your merits, rather than discourage them on your faults.

WHEN THE Elk Grove Village Board meets to decide on the rezoning of the building to allow for an abortion clinic, they might also vote to change their name to Elk Grave.

I READ Mr. Joseph Rosenberger's article in The Daily Herald which attacked the pro-life stand.

I disagree completely with him when he says that the entire anti-abortion movement is nothing but a frenzied attempt on the part of the Roman Catholic Church to impose its religious beliefs on all Americans.

To say that all life is to be held sacred and killing an unborn child is murder is not a purely Catholic viewpoint. It is not only God's law, but it has always been a view held by good Americans until recent years. In our pledge of allegiance, we say "one nation, under God." It was not Roman Catholics who did this. Our country has always believed in God's laws until now.

A woman may be free to do what she wants with her own body, but not when it denies the rights to another life, her unborn child.

'Have a heart'

It's bad enough when "little people" are "eaten up" by progress, but now they're being "eaten up" by landscaping.

This letter is in reference to the story in the Sept. 5 Daily Herald about Hans Loeber, 72. Mr. Loeber is being evicted from his corner because Motorola feels his gas station and home are a "blight" on their 325-acre site. Now that Algonquin Road is all built-up with "Eater's Row" and all the other fine things that come with progress, who needs the little guy that was willing to serve people on the lonely road 20 years ago?

Come on Motorola — how much longer can a 72 year old man last as a "blight" on a corner so remote from your buildings that you must need binoculars to see the station. Can "Big Business" really be this insensitive to an old man who just wants to finish out his few remaining years doing what he knows how to do, and has nowhere else to go?

Flo's rock met a bad $60 end

She is Bronx to the bone, a stately tough-talking tomato. Gladys Glad was billed by Florenz Ziegfeld as "the most beautiful woman in the world." She was designed to walk down staircases in feathers and rhinestones to stage center.

Men have chased Glad since she was 12. She didn't trust them then. She doesn't now. She walks her Park Avenue apartment alone, the drapes drawn against the sun, the green-tinted glasses softening the lines in an ageless face.

It seemed obvious that the most beautiful woman would marry the richest man. Glad fell in love with the first Broadway columnist, Mark Hellinger. He was jaded, jaunty, a dark, slick-haired man who rapped out sob stories with one pecking finger.

HE WARNED HER against the designs of all men except himself. Especially Florenz Ziegfeld. Mark said the impresario's habit was to seduce beauties with a gift of two dozen long-stemmed American beauties with a sparkling gem buried in the bouquet.

The new Follies tried out in Boston. It was lavish with beauty, sets and talent. Then it went to New Haven. And on to Bridgeport. It was still in Boston when Glad found the big bouquet on her dressing table.

Her heart, steeled against men, beat faster. The card said: "Love, Flo." Buried in the stems was a beautiful sapphire ring. It was real, and probably cost $6,000. Glad tried it on. "A real rock," she said.

The only way she could keep it was to hide it when her intended husband dashed up from Broadway in his lavender Kissel. She hid it. After that she had to hold two men off — Ziegfeld and Hellinger. Glad was a tough-talking feminist before she could spell the word.

IT WORKED FOR five weeks. He walked into her dressing room in New Haven one Friday night. She was fatigued. The ring was on her finger. "What's that, baby?" he said. The wheels spun swiftly. "Oh that," she said. "Some of the girls and I were shopping in Boston. I spotted it in a hockshop window. Cute, isn't it Mark?"

He nodded. "Take it off," he said. "It looks pretty good." "Don't waste your time," she snapped. "I picked it up for sixty bucks." He gentled the ring off. "That's a pretty good fake," he said admiringly.

"The setting is loose." He dropped it into his jacket pocket. "I'll get it fixed for you." "No you won't," she said. "I'll do my own fixing." He smoothed the dark blue shirt down beside the snowy tie. "What kind of a bum do you think I am," he said, "to let my best girl lose a stone?"

She was desperate. "It isn't worth fixing," she shouted. He shrugged. "It was pretty enough to catch your eye," he murmured. "Please! Mark!" He tried to kiss her. "You ain't gonna let sixty bucks come between us," he said.

HE PROMISED to have it back next Friday. He arrived. The ring didn't. She demanded her junk ring. He snapped his fingers. "Forgot. Next week for sure." It wasn't back the next week either. However, he had good news.

Mark said he was ashamed, driving her around in that silly roadster. The wind shattered her canary yellow coiffure. It slammed her eyelids shut. They were forced to shout to be heard. He had bought a Cadillac, just for her.

"I want that ring," she said softly. "I'm not kidding, Mark. It's mine." He apologized for forgetting it. The setting had been fixed two weeks ago. It was just his lousy memory.

Glad palmed one of her cynical smiles. "Well," she said, "you just hook up your lousy memory next Friday and bring that ring, or don't show up. I mean it, Mark." He promised.

THE FOLLOWING Friday, the Follies were playing Bridgeport. When the last curtain went down, Glad threaded her way through the cast to her dressing room. Hellinger was there, grinning and holding a small plush box.

Her hands wer shaking. "Thank you," she said, "for getting it fixed." She snapped the lid up. The platinum mounting was the same. The sapphire was a piece of cheap glass. "This," she said, lips trembling, "is not the same stone."

He kissed her cheek. "Kid," he said, "what kind of a cheapskate do you think I am? I don't want my best girl wearing a sixty-dollar stone. I told the jeweler to toss it in the garbage. This one set me back a hundred." . . .

Carter puts Vietnam relations on back burner

by DANIEL SOUTHERLAND

A promising start toward "normalizing" relations with Vietnam was followed by an apparent negotiating stalemate. Now the Carter administration seems to have placed Vietnam on the back burner among its foreign-policy concerns.

In the latest development, a joint U. S. State Department and Defense Department team are to fly to Hanoi today to collect the remains of 22 American servicemen who were killed in the Indo-China war. But the trip is not expected to produce any breakthroughs in U. S.-Vietnam relations. And the way in which State Department officials referred to it is indicative of the degree to which the Carter administration has "downgraded" its attempts to establish full diplomatic relations with the Vietnamese.

"IT'S A SMALL EVENT in what seems to be an increasingly small area of policy," said one State Department official, alluding to the departure of the joint mission to Hanoi, which will be headed by Frank A. Sieverts.

Sieverts is the State Department's deputy coordinator for prisoner-of-war and missing-in-action matters.

American officials disagree with newspaper reporters' use of the words "stalemate" and "deadlock" to describe the current status of attempts to establish full relations with Vietnam. But the official did admit to the "absence of any progress for the moment." No date or place has been set for a resumption of the two rounds of talks which were conducted in Paris with the Vietnamese by Assistant Secretary of State Richard Holbrooke in May and June.

The main reason given by U.S. officials for this situation is that the Vietnamese are insisting on economic aid as a "precondition" for the establishment of relations. The officials argue that the U.S. is under no obligation to give aid and that anything that looked even vaguely like war "reparations" would never get past the U.S. Congress.

BUT OTHER CONDITIONS have contributed to a "downgrading" of Vietnam on the list of administration priorities (and it was never terribly high on that list to begin with).

First, it is one of those issues that would cost President Carter some of his "political capital," and he is certain now to have to dip heavily into that account in the Congress to secure ratification of the Panama Canal Treaties.

Second, there is a growing feeling in the administration that the Vietnamese need a "normalization" of relations more than the United States does.

And finally, once the decision was made not to push forcefully this year for full diplomatic relations with the People's Republic of China, is followed that no big push would be made to establish relations with Vietnam.

"THERE'S JUST NO question that China is leagues ahead of Vietnam in terms of priority," one U.S. official said.

But the administration does not appear to be completely united on the Vietnam issue. The U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations, Andrew Young, ignored State Department advice recently when he made a warm statement of praise for Vietnam's "independenc struggle" upon the occasion of Vietnam's entry into the United Nations.

State Department officials would have preferred a more restrained statement. And some of them fear that Young may raise unfulfilled expectations about the future of U.S.-Vietnam relations, just as they feel he Carter administration's first mission to Hanoi, earlier this year, raised expectations which are yet to be fulfilled.

THAT MISSION, headed by Leonard Woodcock, now the U.S. envoy to Peking, did succeed, however, in opening negotiations for an eventual resumption of diplomatic relations.

The next step in the negotiating process is likely to be a meeting in New York between U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Duy Trinh, who came to New York for the opening of the United Nations General Assembly. The current State-Defense Department mission to Hanoi is to be limited to a visit of fewer than eight hours to the Vietnamese capital and is not expected to include any negotiations.

Crime here drops 7%, but violent offenses up

Crime declined over-all by 7 per cent in the Northwest suburbs last year, although the number of violent crimes reported to police continues to increase.

Statistics releaeed by the FBI show 17,351 crimes were reported last year to area police compared to 18,638 in 1975. The 1976 figure is higher than 1974 when 16,237 crimes were reported.

The greatest declines were recorded in Des Plaines, Palatine and Schaumburg where over-all crime declined 6 per cent, 21 per cent and 8 per cent respectively.

THE FIGURES also showed a dramatic decline of 75 per cent in the Elk Grove Village crime rate, but figures reported to the FBI by the village were in error, village police said. The error resulted from a computer printout mistake, but officials currently are reviewing statistics and expect revised figures next month.

The village's crime rate probably declined by about 11 per cent, police spokesmen said.

The number of serious crimes reported locally, including murder, manslaughter, rape, robbery and assault, showed a 5 per cent increase, from 615 to 650.

That increase runs against the nationwide suburban trend which showed violent crimes declining 2.7 per cent. Crime in suburbia nationally rose less than 1 per cent.

Property crimes rose slightly in suburbs nationwide.

THE NATIONAL figures show serious crime in the United States increased less than 1 per cent from 1975 to 1976. Atty. Gen. Griffin B. Bell said, however, violent crimes nationwide decreased 4 per cent.

Bell called the figures "encouraging news, particularly when preliminary reports show a 9 per cent decline in reported serious crime for the first three months of 1977."

That decline has been the largest recorded in more than 20 years and has been attributed in part to the severe winter that gripped most of the nation.

Locally, crime reported to police either declined or rose only slightly from 1975 to 1976. The greatest increase was recorded in Rolling Meadows, where 576 incidents were reported in 1976 compred to 445 in 1975.

BUT WHILE the total reflected a 23 per cent increase, the jump was recorded in larceny rather than violent crimes. The city recorded only one assault in 1976 while 450 thefts, 71 burglaries and 54 motor vehicle thefts were reported.

In Hoffman Estates crime rose a modest 2 per cent in 1976. Figures last year indicated a near doubling of the crime rate from 1974 to 1975, but the numbers reflected a change in reporting procedures rather than crime, Police Lt. Robert Manning said.

Crimes reported in Mount Prospect rose 7 per cent in 1976 and 6 per cent in Streamwood.

Ten murders occurred in the area in 1976, the greatest number in Elk Grove Village where Frank, Mary and Michael Columbo were slain by daughter Patricia and her boyfriend, Frank DeLuca.

Two murders occurred in Schaumburg and one each in Arlington Heights, Des Plaines, Hanover Park, Hoffman Estates and Palatine.

Crime here drops 7%, but violent offenses up

Crime declined over-all by 7 per cent in the Northwest suburbs last year, although the number of violent crimes reported to police continues to increase.

Statistics releaeed by the FBI show 17,351 crimes were reported last year to area police compared to 18,638 in 1975. The 1976 figure is higher than 1974 when 16,237 crimes were reported.

The greatest declines were recorded in Des Plaines, Palatine and Schaumburg where over-all crime declined 6 per cent, 21 per cent and 8 per cent respectively.

THE FIGURES also showed a dramatic decline of 75 per cent in the Elk Grove Village crime rate, but figures reported to the FBI by the village were in error, village police said. The error resulted from a computer printout mistake, but officials currently are reviewing statistics and expect revised figures next month.

The village's crime rate probably declined by about 11 per cent, police spokesmen said.

The number of serious crimes reported locally, including murder, manslaughter, rape, robbery and assault, showed a 5 per cent increase, from 615 to 650.

That increase runs against the nationwide suburban trend which showed violent crimes declining 2.7 per cent. Crime in suburbia nationally rose less than 1 per cent.

Property crimes rose slightly in suburbs nationwide.

THE NATIONAL figures show serious crime in the United States increased less than 1 per cent from 1975 to 1976. Atty. Gen. Griffin B. Bell said, however, violent crimes nationwide decreased 4 per cent.

Bell called the figures "encouraging news, particularly when preliminary reports show a 9 per cent decline in reported serious crime for the first three months of 1977."

That decline has been the largest recorded in more than 20 years and has been attributed in part to the severe winter that gripped most of the nation.

Locally, crime reported to police either declined or rose only slightly from 1975 to 1976. The greatest increase was recorded in Rolling Meadows, where 576 incidents were reported in 1976 compred to 445 in 1975.

BUT WHILE the total reflected a 23 per cent increase, the jump was recorded in larceny rather than violent crimes. The city recorded only one assault in 1976 while 450 thefts, 71 burglaries and 54 motor vehicle thefts were reported.

Tax reform plans to be delayed

Treasury Sec. Michael Blumenthal said Thursday President Carter's tax reform proposals — aimed at fairer taxes for all, reductions for some and incentives for creating jobs — will be delayed several months. But he emphasized the tax reform package would go to Congress before the 1977 term ends. "The proposals are now on the President's desk. He has not yet made any final decisions. There has been consultation with the leaderhip in the Congress," Blumenthal said. He said the decison to delay was made because Congress is so tied up with Carter's energy package. The President had hoped to get the proposals to Capitol Hill by late summer.

Trust in economy drops

Business executives are less confident about the U.S. economy than they were three months ago, according to a survey by the Conference Board. The board, which surveyed more than 1,500 corporate chief executive officiers, said its "measure of businss confidence" fell 12 points in the third quarter to 59 per cent. The survey questioned the executives on their attitudes toward current business conditions, the economic outlook for the six months ahead and prospects for their own industries. The survey found their appraisal of business conditions was down 12 per cent from the previous survey, while their outlook for the future was off 14 per cent. In addition, expectations for their own industries were down 9 per cent, the study said.

Defense costs not needed

Massive defense cost overruns, now taken for granted by government and industry alike, are not necessary, the chairman of Northrop Corporation told Congress Thursday. Thomas V. Jones also told the Joint Committee on Defense Production that all government defense plants should be ofefred for sale to private industry. "There seems to be a tendency to consider cost overruns, schedule delays and technical disappointments part of the price we must pay for national security," Jones said. "This is simply not the case. There is no fundamental reason why defense procurement cannot be as efficient as any element of the private sector," Jones said. "What is missing," the head of the defense industry firm, located in Rolling Meadows, said, "is enforced discipline in the budgetary process."

New camera to be sold

Polaroid Corp. announced its new Polarvision movie camera and viewer system will go on sale in California in November. A spokesman said it would be the first marketing of the system, which was revealed and demonstrated by Dr. Edwin Land earlier this year. Polaroid plans to expand its markets for the system next year. The system includes a light, hand-held color camera that records onto a self-developing cassette. The cassette is played on the Polarvision player—similar to a television screen. Suggested list price for the camera and player is $669, the spokesman said, with cassettes costing a suggested $9.95 each.

Coffee prices defended

Brazil made a fighting defense of the high price of coffee today and urged new measures to keep it high. Dr. Camillo Calazans, president of the Brazilian Coffee Institute and perhaps the most powerful single man in the coffee world, rejected calls for a coffee price freeze and warned of an acute shortage to come. "The situation regarding disposable coffee is even more serious now than it was a year ago," Calazans told the International Coffee Council.

Brazil's reserve stocks, which have staved off shortages for the past 15 years, now are exhausted, he said. "There do not exist, for practical purposes, coffee stocks in Brazil," he said. "And since coffee trees mature so slowly, there is no way to produce more coffee quickly enough to cover the deficit of next year's crop. Furthermore, the cycle of frosts in Brazil indicates that next year will be one of extreme danger, with a high probability of another crop-killing frost."

Union caused layoffs: exec

The President of Newport News Shipbuilding Inc. said Thursday the United Steelworkers of America union is resonsible for widespread layoffs in the steel industry. "The domestic steel indusury is no longer competitive," John P. Diesel told the Independent Peninsula Shipbuilders Assn., which represents 19,000 producton and maintenance employes. At least 75,000, and as many as 100,000 steelworkers have been laid off, Diesel said. "These job losses are directly attributable to imported steel," Diesel said. "And why — because the domestic steel industry is no longer competitive." No union, international or not, can force a company to give more than it can afford in the long run. If wage and benefit increases are no commensurate with productivity, a company will price itself out of the market and eventually go out of business, taking with it the jobs of its employes," he said.

China trade talks asked

The European Common Market Commission Thursday called for trade negotiations "as soon as possible" with the People's Republic of China. "The commission has requested the Council of Ministers to approve a negotiating mandate and hopes the talks can start as soon as possible," the commission spokesman said. The council, consisting of foreign ministers of the nine member states, was expected to approve the commission's recommendation.

U.S. economic signs good after lackluster summer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's economy is showing hopeful signs of resurgence after a lackluster summer performance, giving the Carter Administration a "degree of comfort" that its economic growth targets can be reached, Treasury Sec. Michael Blumenthal said Thursday.

Blumenthal's comments were prompted by a Commerce Dept. report which said its index of leading indicators, designed to forecast future economic trends, increased by 0.8 per cent in August — a healthy gain.

Commerce analysts also revised the index for July to an 0.2 per cent gain, instead of the originally announced 0.2 per cent decline.

"It is encouraging to us that things seem to be picking up after the summer lull and moving in the right direction," Blumenthal told a news conference.

"THERE'S A CERTAIN degree of comfort about the likelihood that the conomy will be moving forward on the track that we had envisioned for it."

The index of leading indicators is a government measurement designed to gauge the economy's rise and fall several month before the change actually occur.

Government and private analysts say the index is valuable in predicting trends in employment, industrial production and other elements which make up the over-all economy.

The index went into a minor tailspin during May and June and when the preliminary July figures showed another slight dip, some private economists were suggesting a new recession might be on the horizon.

THE LAST TIME there were three consecutive months of decline was in the 1974-75 recession.

Maynard Comiez, a top Commerce Dept. economist, said Thursday the new figures were "encouraging and reassuring."

"They confirm that the feeling of fear of recession that some people had were not warranted," Comiez said.

The report said the 0.8 per cent increase in the indicators for August pushed the index to 131.3 on a 1967 base of 100.

SIX OF THE 10 indicators available for August increased, three declined and one, the layoff rate, was unchanged.

The sector contributing most to the August gain was contracts and orders for plant and equipment which was up 0.3 per cent from July.

Economists said it is most encouraging that the plant and equipment rose because it indicates new activity by factories which would produce more new jobs.

At his news conference, Blumenthal said the administration is sticking to its prediction that real growth in the economy will reach about 6 per cent for all of 1977 and 5.3 per cent for next year.

New Xerox can copy both sides

NEW YORK (UPI) — Xerox Corp. Thursday introduced a new high-speed duplicator capable of copying both sides of a paper at the rate of two impressions a second and a small copier with a built-in 15-bin sorter.

Xerox also announced it was cutting minimum monthly charges on its 3100 copier family and reducing two-year rental contracts to about 5 per cent below annual rates.

"The new 9400, with its automatic double-side duplicating feature will be in demand in centralized reproduction departments where volume on one machine can run upwards of a half-million copies a month," said David Kearns, president and chief operating officer. "We expect the 9400 to gain acceptance in high-usage, decentralized copying-duplicating areas as well."

The 9400, the successor to the 9200 introduced three years ago, has a self-diagnostic feature which will cut down on service calls, Kearns said.

Utility rates next on Senate energy plan chopping block

by JOHN DILLIN

Next up on the senate's energy chopping block: President Carter's sweeping plan to overhaul utility rates.

The Senate is expected to oppose the plan, which would bring about nationwide changes like time-of-day pricing for electricity.

The House, however, approved most of the Carter proposal, and even added to it. So an acrimonious battle between the two chambers of Congress is predicted.

AS PASSED BY the House, the bill would put Washington squarely in the middle of the rate-making process — an area that has been the province of the states. Some utility firms have been shocked by the bill, which would:

- Require time-of-day pricing that reflects costs. (It is cheaper to supply power late at night and on weeknds.)
- Require seasonal rates.
- Prohibit cheaper rates to big power users, like industry, unless fully cost-justified.
- Ban promotional, political or institutional advertising by utility firms.
- Require utilities to purchase power where available from wind, solar, and other small generating facilities, provided costs don't exceed other sources.
- Requiring "wheeling" — that is, Company A must allow Company B to use its lines to sell power to Company C if A is between B and C.

The Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee voted unanimously to scrap the House plan. In its place, the committee offered a bill that would allow the federal government to intervene only as an advocate for energy conservation in state proceedings.

The full Senate will take up the utility question after the current natural gas debate, and is expected to uphold the committee decision.

TIME-OF-DAY pricing is one of those ideas that sounds good — but which the Senate hesitates to impose. Under the current syshtem, electrical use peaks during the day and early evening; during the night, expensive generating equipment is idle, or runs at low speed.

If that load could be spread by making power cheaper at night, equipment might be more efficiently used.

Individual states, say advocates of this idea, hesitate to try it because it might divert industry from their state to another by making daytime power expensive. But if it were a federal mandate, all states would be on equal ground.

Lobbyists for the power industry say experiments are under way to test the concept, but differences from state to state make it unwise or require time-of-day pricing nationwide.

The Senate vote on utility ratemaking will follow the debate on natural gas — an issue that could be prolonged for days, or even weeks, according to congressional sources.

Exchange fines 3 for bet-making

NEW YORK (UPI) — The New York Stock Exchange Thursday fined and sanctioned three of its members for acting as bookies for sporting events while working on the exchange floor.

The big board began an investigation in late April 1977 into bet-making on the trading floor.

The NYSE said William F. Cullen, Gordon B. Leib and Robert G. Pears, "solely for these proceedings and these priceedings only and without admitting or denying their guilt, were found to have engaged in acts detrimental to the interests and welfare of the exchange in that, while on the floor of the exchange, they accepted on their behalf wagers on sporting events."

Cullen, Lieib and Pears consented to the penalties imposed by an exchange hearing panel.

The three-man hearing panel, headed by a chief hearing officer and two NYSE members, concluded Cullen, Leib and Pears acted independently.

Cullen, an individual member who had been a specialist with Fowler & Rosenau Co. until May 1977, was fined $15,000 and suspended from the exchange for one week.

Leib, a specialist with Corcoran, Leib & Co., received a two-month suspension.

The exchange censured Pears, a commmission broker with the Investment Corporation of Virginia, and fined him $5,000. A censure is more serious than a fine because it goes into the member's personal record.

Utility rates next on Senate energy plan chopping block

by JOHN DILLIN

Next up on the senate's energy chopping block: President Carter's sweeping plan to overhaul utility rates.

The Senate is expected to oppose the plan, which would bring about nationwide changes like time-of-day pricing for electricity.

The House, however, approved most of the Carter proposal, and even added to it. So an acrimonious battle between the two chambers of Congress is predicted.

Families save despite inflation

Jane Bryant Quinn

Staying ahead

NEW YORK — If your personal cost of living is so high that you can't save money, you may assume that everyone else is in the same boat. But in fact they're not. Kiplinger's personal-finance magazine, Changing Times, recently surveyed its readers and found that the overwhelming majority managed to save or invest on a regular schedule.

As you might expect, the highest numbers of nonsavers were among families making less than $10,000. But even in that bracket, 76 per cent managed to put away at least something. Twenty-one per cent saved between $50 and $100 a month, and 31 per cent, more than $100.

Of families making between $10,000 and $15,000, 88 per cent made regular contributions to savings. In the $15,000 to $20,000 group, the portion of savers rose to 93 per cent. Of the latter group, 30 per cent reported that they were able to put away $200 a month or more.

SUBSCRIBERS to Changing Times have a special interest in getting the most for their money, so they're probably more inclined that others to give savings a high priority. But what it shows is that regular savings are possible for middle-income families, even in these inflationary times.

There are three areas in personal finance, however, where even the money-wise make mistakes and the respondents to Kiplinger's survey were no exception.

First, they tended to keep substantial sums in bank accounts, not in high interest term accounts or savings certificates, but plain old passbook savings. Few young people had large savings, but by age 35-44, 22 per cent had passbook savings of $10,000 or more; by age 55-64, that portion rose to 46 per cent. Among lower and lower-middle income people, all or more of their savings were in this form.

Passbook savings are good for special purchases (like a vacation) or emergencies (like a job layoff, or medical bills not covered by insurance). But for most working people a cash reserve of more than $10,000 seems unnecessarily large. The most you can earn on that money is 5 per cent (in a commercial bank) to 6 per cent (in a credit union). But if, instead, you bought a savings certificate from a bank or savings and loan, you could earn as much as 7½ or 7¾ per cent on the same money.

A SECOND POINT is that 90 per cent of the single people in the Kiplinger survey carried life insurance. Many have only a small amount, but others have quite sizable coverage. If you have no dependents, you might think twice about whether you really need life insurance. For your own personal security, a better plan might be to split the payment between disability insurance (for income in case you become unable to work) and bank savings.

Third, people strongly preferred common stocks to mutual funds, suggesting greater confidence in their own stock-picking abilities than in those of professional money managers. Granted, a lot of mutual funds haven't done well over the past 10 years. But it's mainly because the market was bad, not because fund managers are a bunch of dummies.

Dow up 5.37 in good day

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks, propelled by a better-than-expected 0.8 per cent rise in the U.S. Commerce Dept. August economic indicators, scored a solid gain Thursday in active trading.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which fell 1.13 points to a 21-month low Wednesday, climbed 5.37 points to 840.09. Analysts said the Dow, which is down nearly 170 points so far this year, was helped by bargain hunters and large investors adjusting their portfolios for the fourth quarter.

The Commerce Dept. report which sparked the rally also showed a 0.2 per cent July gain instead of the 0.2 per cent decline originally reported. The index slipped in May and June. U.S. Treasury Sec. W. Michael Blumenthal said the report was "encouraging."

So was a McGraw-Hill survey showing a 46 per cent surge in August construction. Blumenthal predicted the economy, measured by the gross national product, would rise 5 per cent next year.

As a result, the New York Sock Exchange common stock index rose 0.30 to 52.44 and the average price of a share increased by 18 cents. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index jumped 0.54 to 95.85.

Advances topped declines, 859 to 483, among the 1,841 issues crossing the composite tape.

Big Board volume totaled 21,160,000 shares, up from the 17,960,000 traded Wednesday.

Prices were higher in moderate trading of American Stock Exchange and over-the-counter issues.

Carter rejects steel import curbs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter Thursday ruled out protectionist legislation to curb steel imports, adding he does not fully accept industry's claim that imports and pollution controls are causing steel layoffs.

Carter, nonetheless, left open the possibility that he may provide some help for the nation's ailing steel industry. Thousands of workers have been laid off in recent weeks.

Industry officials were disappointed by the President's statement. "We regret that the President indicated that he would not take any immediate action in the trade area," said a spokesman for the American Iron and Steel Institute.

Layoffs have increased pressure on Carter to impose quotas or higher tariffs on steel imports, which now comprise nearly 20 per cent of the domestic market. The industry has blamed the layoffs on imports and costly pollution controls.

CARTER SAID at a news conference he does not completely accept that argument. He said the problems in the steel industry are "chronic," and added: "I would not be willing to lay all the blame on imports."

He said many U.S. steel mills are outdated and their chief foreign competitors in Japan and West Germany must comply with similar environmental controls — "which I certainly would not change."

"I don't think any basic changes need to be made in our import laws or in the national statutes," Carter said, apparently ruling out quotas or higher tariffs. But he hinted he might seek voluntary restraints from steel important countries as was done recently for the U.S. television industry.

Carter also said he expects to receive a report in the next few weeks from an interdepartmental task force that has been studying the steel problem. He promised then to meet with labor and management leaders of the industry and congressional members representing steelmaking areas.

Businesses use computer to answer customer letters

by LeROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — When you are angry — or pleased — enough to sit down to write to a company about a product or service, the answer you get could come straight from a computer.

And it could be more to the point, more polite and more prompt than an individually composed reply.

How does it happen that a computer can be trained to answer a big company's consumer correspondence better than real live people?

THERE ARE several answers, according to Bowne Time Sharing Co. of New York. For one thing, the computer doesn't get tired or irritated. It sticks religiously to its job of telling the consumer exactly what he wants to know and doing it in a pleasant way.

Bowne gave an example from a job it does for Best Foods division of CPC International Inc. of Englewood Cliffs, N.J.

Best Foods gets about 2,000 letters a month from users of its products. Barbara Nappi, the consumer relations manager, has to answer these letters and the company wants them answered within 48 hours if possible. It's done by means of time on one of Bowne's computers in which a collection of 370 carefully preplanned letters is stored.

Before turning to Bowne, Best Foods used automatic typewriters for this job with pre-programmed tapes resembling player-piano rolls. But that system wasn't nearly fast enough. It sometimes took up to three weeks to answer a letter. The Bowne computer not only does it in the 48 hours but requires only one half-time operator against two full time for the older system.

THE PERSON answering a letter doesn't have to compose a reply, but generally just selects from a working manual the appropriate letter to answer the customer's query.

These letters, however, are stored as individual paragraphs, composed at leisure and carefully considered and revised by various executives long before they go into the computer.

The correspondence staff, therefore, is not limited to the format letters but can substitute specific paragraphs from the computer bank if necessary.

"We consider it essential that we understand each consumer letter and the answer we plan specifically responds to the questions raised," Miss Nappi explained.

Once a correspondence specialist has considered the questions raised in a consumer letter, an individual instruction sheet is filled out specifying paragraph codes, appropriate insertions, and additional information to be stored in the computer system for later retrieval as part of a monthly customer relations reporting function.

Ali's crown battered but victorious

by STEVE WILSTEIN

NEW YORK (UPI) — Muhammad Ali barely saved his world heavyweight championship Thursday night when he staved off a late charge by Earnie Shavers and almost knocked out the challenger in the 15th round to score another controversial unanimous decision.

The crowd of 14,613 booed the decision of the officials, who gave Ali a better break than he seemed to deserve. Eva Shain, the first woman to score a championship fight, and official Tony Castellano both had Ali winning nine rounds to Shavers' six, while referee John LoBianco ad Ali 9-5-1. UPI scored it 8-6-1 for Ali.

Ali, who lost the 13th and 14th rounds to the inspired fourth-ranked slugger, staggered Shavers in the final round with punishing lefts and rights to the head. Shavers stayed on his feet by sheer will-power to the end and Ali's cornermen jumped with joy and relief at the decision.

ALI, WHO NOW HAS been pressed to go 15 rounds in six of his last nine fights, had much more of a struggle than he bargained for to earn his $3 million purse and far more than the officials' cards would indicate.

Ali went down from a push by Shavers and wetness on the canvas in the 14th round and the referee ruled it was a slip while the timekeeper stopped his count at two.

Ali moved away, but Shavers hurt him with a solid right to the head and the champion could barely cover up at the bell when Shavers hit him twice more in the head.

There were no knockdowns in the fight, but that took nothing away from the most exciting Ali bout since his "thrilla in Manila" with Joe Frazier.

The fight was nowhere near the battle of that third bout with Frazier, but it was the only time since that Ali seemed in serious trouble.

SHAVERS CAUGHT Ali with an overhead right to the cheek 45 seconds into the 13th round, but Ali pushed him away and danced around the ring. Shavers caught up to him in a neutral corner and connected with another right.

Ali looked worried late in the 13th when Shavers hit him with a rare combination and followed with a looping right that rocked Ali in his corner.

Shavers' greatest problem was his inability to put together successful combinations, relying instead on the awesome power that kayoed 52 previous victims.

Ali suffered a slight redness on his nose in the second round, but Shavers received the only cut of the fight in the 10th when blood trickled from his nose, and the wound was reopened in the 12th by a quick combination. Ali then battered the challengers' shaven skull without significantly hurting him in the last 30 seconds of the 12th.

The 10th round was the best of the fight, as Shavers clipped Ali with a hard right to the head early in the round and Ali blinked and covered up after another right by Shavers.

The crowd booed the relatively light action in the middle rounds and, between rounds, Ali booed back.

Both fighters had predicted seventh-round knockouts, but neither came close.

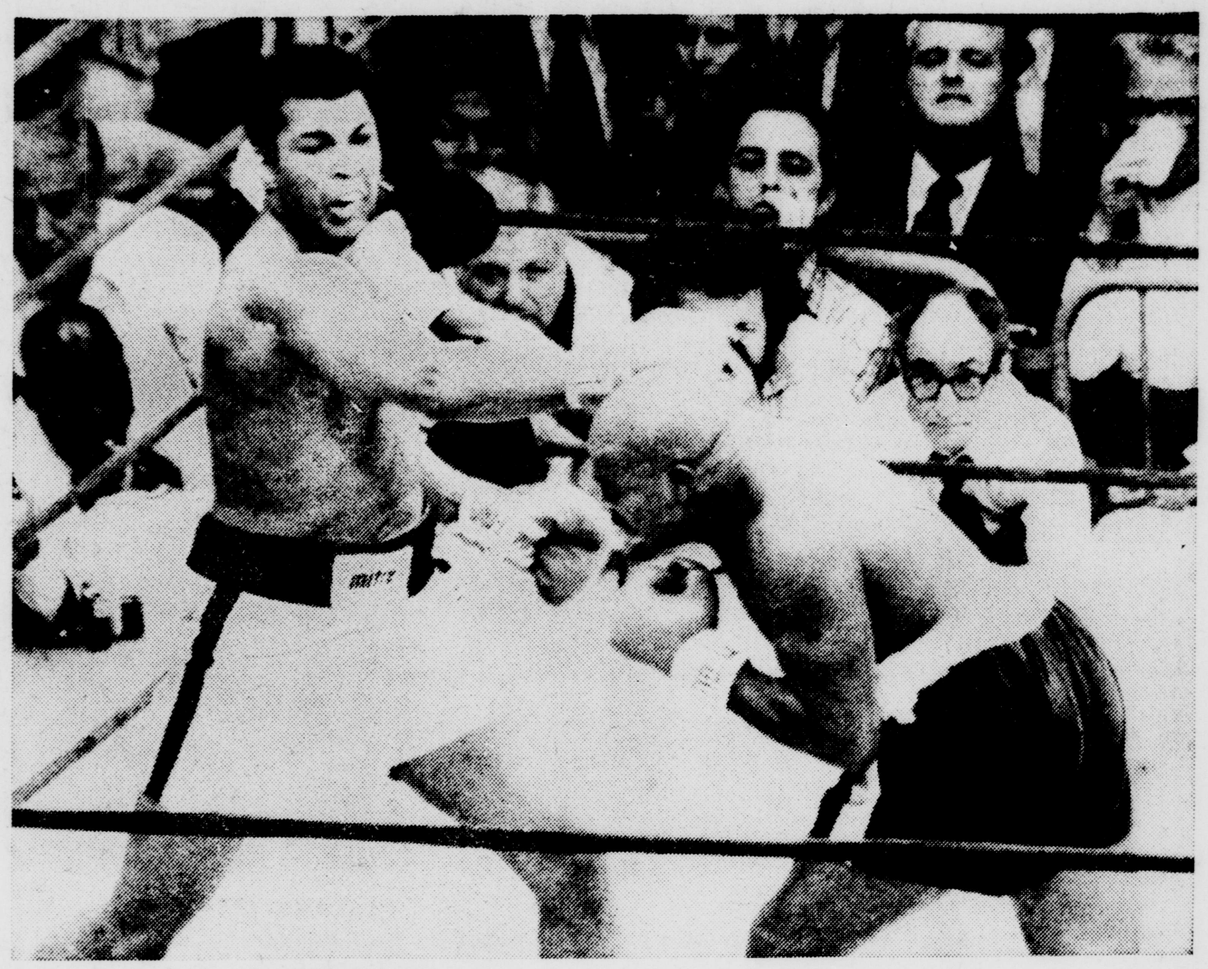
First woman judge at title fight

NEW YORK (UPI) — Eva Shain became the first woman to judge a world heavyweight championship fight Thursday night when she officiated at the Muhammad Ali-Earnie Shavers title bout at Madison Square Garden.

Shain, who wouldn't reveal her age but admitted she was about to become a grandmother, was no stranger to boxing. She previously officiated at dozens of other fights, including the George Foreman-Joe Frazier non-title fight in June 1976.

Tony Castellano was the second judge at ringside, while veteran refereee Johnny LoBianco acted as the third man in the ring.



EARNIE SHAVERS tags Muhammad Ali with a long right in their heavyweight championship bout Thursday night at Madison Square Garden. Ali barely saved his title when he staved off a late charge by Shavers to score another controversal unanimous decision. The crowd of 14,613 boosed the decision of the officials, favoring the inspired performance of the fourth-ranked Shavers.

With its imperfections, college football is real sport

Bob Frisk

Sports Editor

Humble Howard Cosell, the mouth that roars and roars and roars some more on ABC's Monday Night Football, called it "as great a game as you could ask for."

Cosell, caught up in the drama of the closing seconds of Cleveland's overtime victory over New England, used more superlatives than normal this week.

Howard has something to talk about for a change. The Monday night offering was, indeed, an interesting football game ,even exciting by pro standards, but it still paled by comparison to that incredible Oklahoma victory over Ohio State 48 hours earlier.

SORRY, HOWARD. Your professional game is OK, but I'll take the college game anytime. It's just more fun — in person or on television.

For your entertainment dollar the high school game is still the best buy anywhere. When you're talking about paying good money for tickets, the college game is king.

That's strictly a personal opinion, but it's an opinion that's fortified every fall. It's worth talking about again.

There is absolutely nothing wrong with the pro game if that's what you want. The players' skills obviously are enormous. The weak and unskilled have been eliminated by the time they reach the NFL. It can be entertainment of a high order.

HOWEVER, COOL perfection can be deadly dull. The beauty of the college game is that the players come with imperfections.

By trying more things, the colleges are prone to more error. By being less rehearsed in their act, they are not as precise in their execution. In the pros it seems to be let the other guy lose, then we'll win. In college the game is unpredictable.

In one vital sense, college football is much like the pros. Both are big business. While NFL dollars go into the players' pockets, the colleges spend heavily to provide educations and recruit and board big kids with quick feet.

To most of the country, the pros are another world. The NFL is but another television show, right in there with The Fonz.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL gives the paying customer a day of fun, a reminder that he once was young and full of imperfections unnoticed.

There's something special about college football when a person is still an undergraduate.

It is a strangely warm feeling to be part of a college football Saturday.

I'll never forget those football Saturdays on the University of Illinois campus in the 1950s. It was a precious time, a beautiful time, a time to be appreciated.

EVEN TODAY, strolling through the campus on game day enables you to catch once more the excitement of pleasures past. People are everywhere, a swirl of motion. They are hustling, moving along quickly, eager to get inside.

The essence of college football is something the pros just can't duplicate. There is a spirit about it, a drawing together.

People identify with a college team, and it is totally unlike the very tenuous identification a pro fan may feel for a couple hours on a Sunday.

How rich a part tradition plays for the colleges.

College football is romantic figures with dramatic names like The Gipper, Choo Choo, Mr. Inside and Mr. Outside, the Galloping Ghost.

I GET THE SHIVERS just thinking about the Golden Dome of Notre Dame, Chief Illiniwek's halftime shows in Champaign, "Hail to the Victors" in Ann Arbor, a Trojan on horseback, triumphantly circling the field after a USC touchdown.

College football thrives on deep loyalty, tradition, the sight of a bell tower, the sound of its bells.

Staged in such an idealized setting, college football is a game of inspired make-believe. Unlike pro football players, who are working, college football players are playing.

Ninety-eight per cent of them will never play the game after they finish college. The game that seems all-important Saturday really isn't, nor should it be.

COLLEGE football has elements that merit criticism, such as cutthroat recruiting, but at many schools it is something that alumni and friends enjoy rallying around. Something worthwhile.

The life of the college game is found not only on the field but in the peripheral activities. The entreaties and tricks of the cheerleading squads, the pom pon girls, the stirring sounds of the bands, are all part of the flavor of the college game.

Transfer them to the professionals and there is nothing more meaningless.

If the pros had a sense of decorum, they would send all those plastic cheerleaders back where they came from. Make-believe cheerleaders may be nice to look at on the NFL fields, but they seem so out of place, so unnecessary.

College football has real cheerleaders who produce real laughs and cry real tears.

Rah rah. Sis-boom-bah!

TRYING TO FIRE up prior to the start of another game, University of Michigan players charge onto the field underneath the "Go Blue" banner. "It is a strangely warm feeling to be part of a college football Saturday," writes Bob Frisk in today's column.

Grenadiers host Falcons tonight in key grid contest

by JEFF NORDLUND

The coaches at Elk Grove and Forest View — two teams which clash in this weekend's key grid contest — spent the week doing what most coaches do in these situations.

In practice they geared their teams for the impending meeting of two Mid-Suburban League powers, while publicly they traded kid-glove compliments.

The gloves come off today at 8 p.m. when the Grenadiers host the Falcons as both teams bid to remain undefeated in MSL South Division play. But coaches are cautious, and they know it is best not to say something inflamatory about the opponent prior to the game.

"OUR SCOUTS don't understand why Forest View isn't ranked any higher,'' Elk Grove coach Don Schnake said this week. "Their talent is one of the best kept secrets of the year.

"I'm extremely impressed with their quarterback, receivers and defense. Their running game is solid and they pass well."

All phases covered, there is still plenty of truth in what Schnake said about the Falcons (1-0). Gaining momentum since a season-opening, overtime loss to Wheaton North, Forest View has come on strong with victories over Hersey and Hoffman Estates.

Smaller than the Grenadiers (1-0), Forest View coach Fred Lussow thought best to make light of the situation.

"WE HOPE THEY'RE injured," Lussow joked this week. "The game is such a physical mismatch, we're going to need three more guys on the field just to equalize it.

"If we get caught playing 'mud ball,' it's all over. We've only got one guy still playing who weighs over 200 pounds."

Elk Grove's size and punishing ground attack represent the biggest obstacle in Forest View's path to keeping a share of first place. Elk Grove has sandwiched impressive wins over Joliet Central and Conant between a one-point loss to Barrington.

Elk Grove's wishbone offense is led by quarterback Ralph Souder and running backs Jack Walsh and Jim Meyer. Souder is the lightest of the three at 187 pounds, while Walsh weighs 203 and Meyer is 190.

High school football

The Falcons' offense is led by junior quarterback Jeff Nelson. It was Nelson's 72-yard scamper for a touchdown on the first play from scrimmage last week which set the tone for Forest View's 46-0 rout of Hoffman Estates.

BARRINGTON (1-0) will try and continue to remain atop the North Division standings when it travels to Wheeling (0-1) tonight. Though the Broncos came into the MSL this season with a big reputation, few expected them to be able to defeat Elk Grove and Hersey in successive weekends.

The potent Barrington passing threat of Bruce Henricksen to Eric Shellenback will be a major concern of the Wildcats, who suffered their first loss of the season last week to undefeated Fremd.

"They throw the ball well," admitted Wheeling coach Garry Clinnin. "They're not any bigger than us, though, and I believe we can establish a running game. Ball control will be the key to the game."

ELSEWHERE IN the North Division, Fremd (1-0) will travel to Buffalo Grove (0-1) Saturday afternoon. Having outscored their opponents 67-10 and outgained them in total offense yardage 827-350 in three contests this season, the Vikings have become a MSL power.

Kevin Weaver has spearheaded Fremd's offense with 466 yards in 77 carries over three games. He has a 6.1 yards per carry average. The line work of Doug Ahrens, Greg Simetz, Dave McKinnney, Tom Perez, Chris Mein, Marty Finis and Duane Amell has been a big factor in Wever's success.

Arlington (0-1) and Hersey (0-1), two teams unaccustomed to winless starts three games into the season, will clash at the Huskies' field tonight.

"Our mental attitude is pretty good, and mathematically we're still alive," Hersey coach Joe Gliwa said. "I was pleased with the play of quarterback Dan Vukovich against Barrington (last weekend). He was just pressing a little bit the week before against Forest View.

Hersey is the defending North Division champion, having won or shared the last six titles. The Huskies will be hampered tonight by the loss of running back Jim Michaels, who may be lost for the season as a result of torn tendons in his knee.

IN OTHER SOUTH Division games, Rolling Meadows (0-0) travels to Prospect (1-0) tonight. The undefeated Knights are leery of the Mustangs, whose only loss this season came to highly-regarded Elgin.

"Right from the start Rolling Meadows has been rated as one of the teams to beat in our conference, and we're worried about them," Prospect coach Gary Grouwinkle said.

"I know we can't beat them if we fumble the ball the way we did in the Schaumburg game. I know Meadows lost to Elgin, but that's definitely no disgrace. Since then they've pretty much hit stride. I don't think I can say the same thing of our team yet, though."

AT SCHAUMBURG, Hoffman Estates (0-1) and the Saxons (0-1) will meet Saturday afternoon in a contest which will give one of the teams its first victory of the season. Hoffman is still searching for its first points after two defeats.

At Conant, Palatine will tackle the Cougars in a MSL crossover game. Palatine beat Conant 14-3 in this contest last year to end a 15-game losing streak. This year, the Pirates should be high again, coming off their impressive victory over Buffalo Grove last weekend.

Undefeated St. Viator (1-0) will travel to St. Patrick (1-0) tonight in a key East Suburban Catholic contest. The Lions are 3-0 this season over-all, while the hosts have already lost twice.

IN THE BEST nonconference matchup of the weekend in this area, Maine West (2-1) will travel to Elgin (3-0) tonight. The Warriors have been strictly a ground-attack team so far this season, while Elgin has passed successfully.

"We've just got to eliminate our mistakes and control the ball," Maine West coach Dan Mortier said. "At this point, we're building and trying not to get fancy too early.

"We're going to have to stop Elgin's speed, shutting off their passing attack."

by STEVE WILSTEIN

NEW YORK (UPI) — Muhammad Ali barely saved his world heavyweight championship Thursday night when he staved off a late charge by Earnie Shavers and almost knocked out the challenger in the 15th round to score another controversial unanimous decision.

The crowd of 14,613 booed the decision of the officials, who gave Ali a better break than he seemed to deserve. Eva Shain, the first woman to score a championship fight, and official Tony Castellano both had Ali winning nine rounds to Shavers' six, while referee John LoBianco ad Ali 9-5-1. UPI scored it 8-6-1 for Ali.

Ali, who lost the 13th and 14th rounds to the inspired fourth-ranked slugger, staggered Shavers in the final round with punishing lefts and rights to the head. Shavers stayed on his feet by sheer will-power to the end and Ali's cornermen jumped with joy and relief at the decision.

ALI, WHO NOW HAS been pressed to go 15 rounds in six of his last nine fights, had much more of a struggle than he bargained for to earn his $3 million purse and far more than the officials' cards would indicate.

Ali went down from a push by Shavers and wetness on the canvas in the 14th round and the referee ruled it was a slip while the timekeeper stopped his count at two.

Ali moved away, but Shavers hurt him with a solid right to the head and the champion could barely cover up at the bell when Shavers hit him twice more in the head.

There were no knockdowns in the fight, but that took nothing away from the most exciting Ali bout since his "thrilla in Manila" with Joe Frazier.

The fight was nowhere near the battle of that third bout with Frazier, but it was the only time since that Ali seemed in serious trouble.

SHAVERS CAUGHT Ali with an overhead right to the cheek 45 seconds into the 13th round, but Ali pushed him away and danced around the ring. Shavers caught up to him in a neutral corner and connected with another right.

Ali looked worried late in the 13th when Shavers hit him with a rare combination and followed with a looping right that rocked Ali in his corner.

Shavers' greatest problem was his inability to put together successful combinations, relying instead on the awesome power that kayoed 52 previous victims.

Ali suffered a slight redness on his nose in the second round, but Shavers received the only cut of the fight in the 10th when blood trickled from his nose, and the wound was reopened in the 12th by a quick combination. Ali then battered the challengers' shaven skull without significantly hurting him in the last 30 seconds of the 12th.

The 10th round was the best of the fight, as Shavers clipped Ali with a hard right to the head early in the round and Ali blinked and covered up after another right by Shavers.

The crowd booed the relatively light action in the middle rounds and, between rounds, Ali booed back.

Both fighters had predicted seventh-round knockouts, but neither came close.

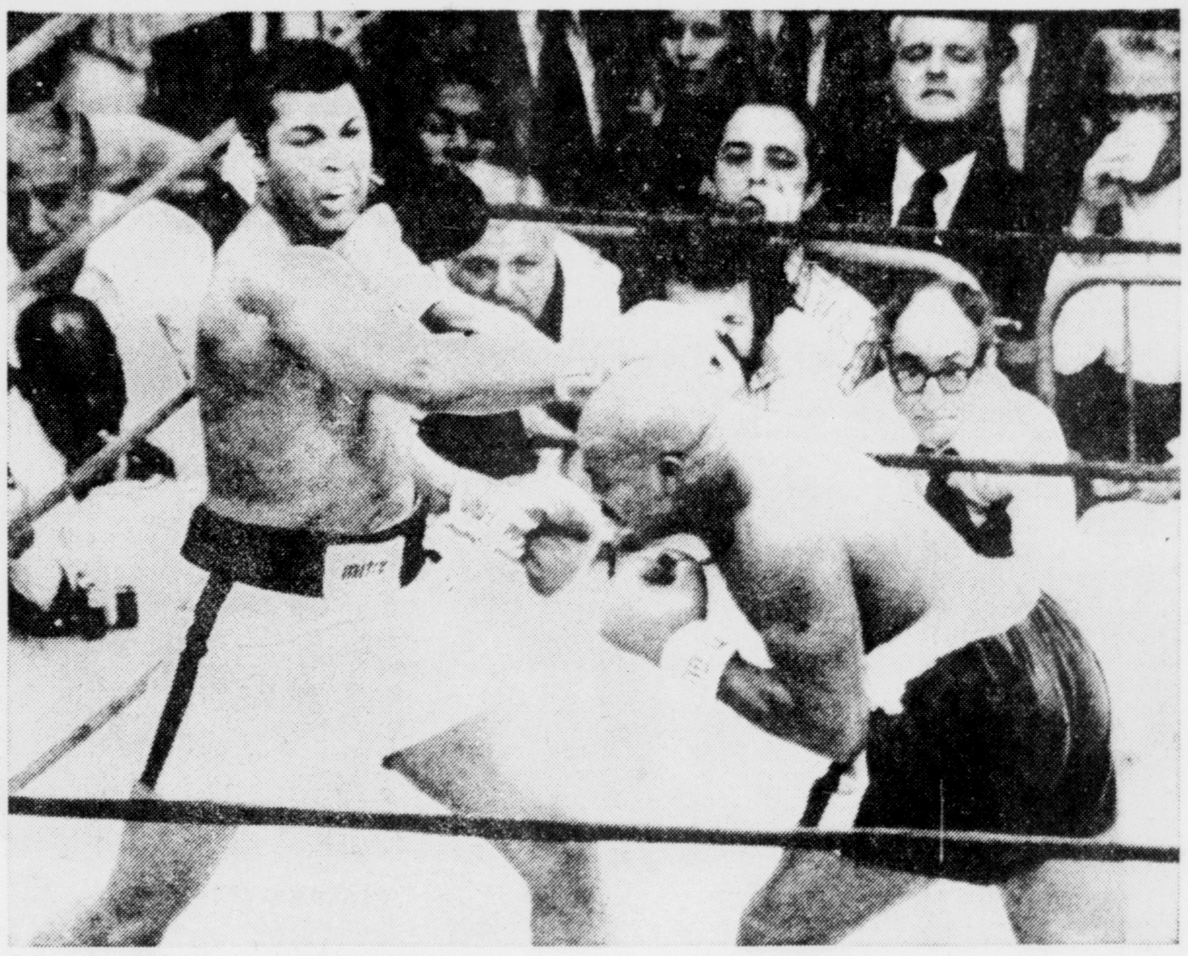
First woman judge at title fight

NEW YORK (UPI) — Eva Shain became the first woman to judge a world heavyweight championship fight Thursday night when she officiated at the Muhammad Ali-Earnie Shavers title bout at Madison Square Garden.

Shain, who wouldn't reveal her age but admitted she was about to become a grandmother, was no stranger to boxing. She previously officiated at dozens of other fights, including the George Foreman-Joe Frazier non-title fight in June 1976.

Tony Castellano was the second judge at ringside, while veteran refereee Johnny LoBianco acted as the third man in the ring.



EARNIE SHAVERS tags Muhammad Ali with a long right in their heavyweight championship bout Thursday night at Madison Square Garden. Ali barely saved his title when he staved off a late charge by Shavers to score another controversal unanimous decision. The crowd of 14,613 boosed the decision of the officials, favoring the inspired performance of the fourth-ranked Shavers.

With its imperfections, college football is real sport

Bob Frisk

Sports Editor

Humble Howard Cosell, the mouth that roars and roars and roars some more on ABC's Monday Night Football, called it "as great a game as you could ask for."

Cosell, caught up in the drama of the closing seconds of Cleveland's overtime victory over New England, used more superlatives than normal this week.

Howard has something to talk about for a change. The Monday night offering was, indeed, an interesting football game ,even exciting by pro standards, but it still paled by comparison to that incredible Oklahoma victory over Ohio State 48 hours earlier.

SORRY, HOWARD. Your professional game is OK, but I'll take the college game anytime. It's just more fun — in person or on television.

For your entertainment dollar the high school game is still the best buy anywhere. When you're talking about paying good money for tickets, the college game is king.

That's strictly a personal opinion, but it's an opinion that's fortified every fall. It's worth talking about again.

There is absolutely nothing wrong with the pro game if that's what you want. The players' skills obviously are enormous. The weak and unskilled have been eliminated by the time they reach the NFL. It can be entertainment of a high order.

HOWEVER, COOL perfection can be deadly dull. The beauty of the college game is that the players come with imperfections.

By trying more things, the colleges are prone to more error. By being less rehearsed in their act, they are not as precise in their execution. In the pros it seems to be let the other guy lose, then we'll win. In college the game is unpredictable.

In one vital sense, college football is much like the pros. Both are big business. While NFL dollars go into the players' pockets, the colleges spend heavily to provide educations and recruit and board big kids with quick feet.

To most of the country, the pros are another world. The NFL is but another television show, right in there with The Fonz.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL gives the paying customer a day of fun, a reminder that he once was young and full of imperfections unnoticed.

There's something special about college football when a person is still an undergraduate.

It is a strangely warm feeling to be part of a college football Saturday.

I'll never forget those football Saturdays on the University of Illinois campus in the 1950s. It was a precious time, a beautiful time, a time to be appreciated.

EVEN TODAY, strolling through the campus on game day enables you to catch once more the excitement of pleasures past. People are everywhere, a swirl of motion. They are hustling, moving along quickly, eager to get inside.

The essence of college football is something the pros just can't duplicate. There is a spirit about it, a drawing together.

People identify with a college team, and it is totally unlike the very tenuous identification a pro fan may feel for a couple hours on a Sunday.

How rich a part tradition plays for the colleges.

College football is romantic figures with dramatic names like The Gipper, Choo Choo, Mr. Inside and Mr. Outside, the Galloping Ghost.

I GET THE SHIVERS just thinking about the Golden Dome of Notre Dame, Chief Illiniwek's halftime shows in Champaign, "Hail to the Victors" in Ann Arbor, a Trojan on horseback, triumphantly circling the field after a USC touchdown.

College football thrives on deep loyalty, tradition, the sight of a bell tower, the sound of its bells.

Staged in such an idealized setting, college football is a game of inspired make-believe. Unlike pro football players, who are working, college football players are playing.

Ninety-eight per cent of them will never play the game after they finish college. The game that seems all-important Saturday really isn't, nor should it be.

COLLEGE football has elements that merit criticism, such as cutthroat recruiting, but at many schools it is something that alumni and friends enjoy rallying around. Something worthwhile.

The life of the college game is found not only on the field but in the peripheral activities. The entreaties and tricks of the cheerleading squads, the pom pon girls, the stirring sounds of the bands, are all part of the flavor of the college game.

Transfer them to the professionals and there is nothing more meaningless.

If the pros had a sense of decorum, they would send all those plastic cheerleaders back where they came from. Make-believe cheerleaders may be nice to look at on the NFL fields, but they seem so out of place, so unnecessary.

College football has real cheerleaders who produce real laughs and cry real tears.

Rah rah. Sis-boom-bah!

TRYING TO FIRE up prior to the start of another game, University of Michigan players charge onto the field underneath the "Go Blue" banner. "It is a strangely warm feeling to be part of a college football Saturday," writes Bob Frisk in today's column.

Grenadiers host Falcons tonight in key grid contest

by JEFF NORDLUND

The coaches at Elk Grove and Forest View — two teams which clash in this weekend's key grid contest — spent the week doing what most coaches do in these situations.

In practice they geared their teams for the impending meeting of two Mid-Suburban League powers, while publicly they traded kid-glove compliments.

The gloves come off today at 8 p.m. when the Grenadiers host the Falcons as both teams bid to remain undefeated in MSL South Division play. But coaches are cautious, and they know it is best not to say something inflamatory about the opponent prior to the game.

"OUR SCOUTS don't understand why Forest View isn't ranked any higher,'' Elk Grove coach Don Schnake said this week. "Their talent is one of the best kept secrets of the year.

"I'm extremely impressed with their quarterback, receivers and defense. Their running game is solid and they pass well."

All phases covered, there is still plenty of truth in what Schnake said about the Falcons (1-0). Gaining momentum since a season-opening, overtime loss to Wheaton North, Forest View has come on strong with victories over Hersey and Hoffman Estates.

Yanks lose, magic number still 1

From Daily Herald wire services

Wayne Garland, facing a 20-loss season, fired a six-hitter Thursday night and the Cleveland Indians defeated the New York Yankees, 4-1, to keep the Yankees' magic number for clinching the American League East pennant at one.

Boston and Baltimore both won Thursday night and trail the first-place Yankees by three games with three games remaining.

Garland, a 20-game winner last season for Baltimore, walked three and struck out one in pitching his 21st complete game of the season for a 13-19 record.

Major league baseball

Cleveland scored the first run in the third inning when Alfredo Griffin drew a walk off starter and loser Ed Figueroa, stole second, moved to third on Dave Oliver's single and scored when Larvell Blanks bounced into a fielder's choice.

FIGUEROA LEFT after the next pitch to Andre Thornton with a strained muscle in his left side, yielding to Ken Clay. Rick Manning belted his fifth home run of the season into the right center field bleachers with no one on in the fourth inning for the Indians' second run.

The Indians added a run in the fifth after Griffin stroked a leadoff single to left. Jim Norris walked and Griffin went to third when Norris was thrown out stealing. Oliver then cracked an RBI single to center field to make it 3-0.

Cleveland's final run came in the seventh when Norris hit a one-out single, stole second and scored when shortstop Bucky Dent threw wildly past first base after fielding Blanks' grounder.

NEW YORK spoiled Garland's shutout bid in the eighth when Roy White drew a one-out walk and scored on Reggie Jackson's two-out double to the right center-field fence.

Jim Rice, without an RBI in his last 14 games, drove in four runs with a three-run homer and a sacrifice fly and Bob Stanley threw 4-1/3 innings of hitless relief to pace Boston to a 7-3 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays and keep the Red Sox alive.

Ken Singleton hit a career-high 24th homer and rookie Eddie Murray drove in four runs with a pair of two-run singles to stretch his batting streak to 13 games, enabling the Baltimore Orioles to defeat the Detroit Tigers, 6-3, and complete a sweep of their three-game series.

Rudy May went 8-2/3 innings to gain his 18th victory against 14 losses as the Tigers dropped their seventh straight game in Baltimore and 12th in 15 starts against the Orioles this season.

The Montreal Expos routed 23-game winner Steve Carlton for four first-inning runs and held on to defeat the Eastern Division champion Philadelphia Phillies 7-2 behind the combied seven-hit pitching of Fred Holdsworth and Don Stanhouse.

Phil Garner knocked in three runs with two singles and a triple and pitcher Terry Forster doubled in another run to lead the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 5-2 triumph over the New York Mets.

LAURA STERN SHARES her championship ribbon with 'Trust Fund' after winningthe class that qualified her for Madison Square Garden in November.

16-year-old horse rider qualifies for national meet

When the Fox Chase Farm Horse Show in Barrington Hills ended, 16-year-old Laura Stern of Arlington Heights found her arms filled with silver trophies and blue ribbons.

Except for one class in which they placed second, Laura and "Trust Fund," a dark bay thoroughbred owned by Rose Jayne, won every jumping class in which they entered. Laura was awarded the Junior Working Hunter 15-17 championship and trophy and also won two blue ribbons in Equitation 15-17, one in jumping and one non-jumping.

On the first day of the show, Laura won her second qualifying medal in the ASPCA (American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals) medal class. This qualifies her for the finals at one of the most prestigious Eastern shows, the National Horse Show in Madison Square Garden this November.

MORE THAN 200 junior riders who have qualified for this exciting ride-off will be coming from all over the country to compete. It is expected that, when the field is narrowed down to about 15 riders, portions of the competition will be nationally televised.

At the Dunham Woods Horse Show in Wayne, Ill., Laura and "It's Cool," owned by Virginia Shiffman and Al Barasch, made a clean sweep of the Modified Jumper championship by winning all three modified jumper classes. Laura also was reserve champion in the Equitation 15-17 division.

Laura trains and shows with Frank M. Jayne Jr. at Northwestern Stables in Morton Grove, where she now is preparing to compete at the Blue Ribbon Horse Show in Northbrook this weekend. She again will be showing "Trust Fund" and "It's Cool" along with "Sirocco," a jumper owned by Horst Stuckenbrock.

Yanks lose, magic number still 1

From Daily Herald wire services

Wayne Garland, facing a 20-loss season, fired a six-hitter Thursday night and the Cleveland Indians defeated the New York Yankees, 4-1, to keep the Yankees' magic number for clinching the American League East pennant at one.

Boston and Baltimore both won Thursday night and trail the first-place Yankees by three games with three games remaining.

Garland, a 20-game winner last season for Baltimore, walked three and struck out one in pitching his 21st complete game of the season for a 13-19 record.

Major league baseball

Cleveland scored the first run in the third inning when Alfredo Griffin drew a walk off starter and loser Ed Figueroa, stole second, moved to third on Dave Oliver's single and scored when Larvell Blanks bounced into a fielder's choice.

FIGUEROA LEFT after the next pitch to Andre Thornton with a strained muscle in his left side, yielding to Ken Clay. Rick Manning belted his fifth home run of the season into the right center field bleachers with no one on in the fourth inning for the Indians' second run.

The Indians added a run in the fifth after Griffin stroked a leadoff single to left. Jim Norris walked and Griffin went to third when Norris was thrown out stealing. Oliver then cracked an RBI single to center field to make it 3-0.

Cleveland's final run came in the seventh when Norris hit a one-out single, stole second and scored when shortstop Bucky Dent threw wildly past first base after fielding Blanks' grounder.

NEW YORK spoiled Garland's shutout bid in the eighth when Roy White drew a one-out walk and scored on Reggie Jackson's two-out double to the right center-field fence.

Jim Rice, without an RBI in his last 14 games, drove in four runs with a three-run homer and a sacrifice fly and Bob Stanley threw 4-1/3 innings of hitless relief to pace Boston to a 7-3 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays and keep the Red Sox alive.

Ken Singleton hit a career-high 24th homer and rookie Eddie Murray drove in four runs with a pair of two-run singles to stretch his batting streak to 13 games, enabling the Baltimore Orioles to defeat the Detroit Tigers, 6-3, and complete a sweep of their three-game series.

Bears trim Gilliam from squad and bench Clemons

by BOB GALLAS

Bears' coach Jack Pardee vowed some changes would be made this week and Thursday he made good his promise, cutting recently acquired wide receiver John Gilliam and announcing veteran safety Craig Clemons has been benched.

Gilliam, who was picked up as a free agent from Atlanta Sept. 14, had apparently seen his better days with the Minnesota Vikings and did not fit into Bear plans. He had been thrown to only once in two games and dropped that pass.

His departure came as about as much surprise as his arrival, considering Pardee said only Wednesday that Gilliam "will be playing quite a bit," though he did not say where.

CLEMONS IS IN his fifth season as starting strong safety and has played in 72 consecutive games to lead the club. However the Bears rank last in defense in the NFL after two games and Clemons has had trouble on coverages this season, though Pardee said Clemons has been playing "injured."

With the departure of Gilliam, the Bears have signed free agent Chuck Bradley, a third-year tight end who formerly played for San Diego and also the Southern California Sun in the defunct World Football League.

Craig Clemons

He's 6-6 and weighs 250 pounds.

Pardee soft-pedaled Clemons' demotion, saying the safety's ankle and thigh have been bothering him. "He's gone ahead and played but hasn't been 100 per cent," said Pardee.

Gary Fencik, who has done exceptionally well in two games filling in for the injured Doug Plank at free safety, will take over Clemons' spot this week and 4th year man Terry Schmidt will play at free safety. Plank is expected back for next week's game against the Rams and Pardee was asked if the switch this week was done with an eye on keeping Fencik in the lineup once Plank returns.

"YOU CAN BET it crossed our minds," said Pardee. Fencik, a second-year man from Barrington High School and Yale University, has 25 tackles in two game to lead the team.

"To a certain extent I'm sure he (Clemons) does't like the idea of not starting," said Pardee. "But he's had two of his best practices of the year this week. The pressure's off and he's been able to work on fundamentals more."

Pardee thinks the switch to Schmidt and Fencik in the defensive secondary will improve the club's pass defense. "With Terry in there we can change the defenses around more because Terry can cover the backs, slot men or wide receivers," Pardee said.

Gilliam, 32, was dropped after spending but 15 days on the Chicago roster. "He just wasn't accomplishing things he'd done earlier (in his career)," Pardee said. "It looked like the first week he was here he was gonna get there, but he didn't progress or surpass the players we already have."

BRADLEY IS expected to play on special teams, though probably only on the kickoff return team this week. Pardee is also trying to light a fire under his kickoff return and kickoff receiving teams, which have performed poorly in the first two games.

Rookie guard Ted Albrecht continues to work ahead of Jeff Sevy at tackle, in practice, though Pardee said Thursday that "no decision has been made" as to whether Sevy or Albrecht will start against New Orelans Sunday.

Sevy fell into disfavor when he failed to get down into the set position in the closing seconds of Sunday's game in St. Louis, and, as a result, time ran out. The Bears had moved into field goal range and might have tied the score had they been able to stop the clock with an incomplete pass. They lost 16-13.

Sunday's opponent, the Saints, received more bad news for their already depleted wide receiving corps Thursday when Larry Burton became their second receiver this week to go on the injured reserve list, which means he will sit out the rest of the season. Tinker Owens, who hasn't played since the final preseason game, went on the injured reserve list Tuesday.

That leaves the Saints with just three bonafide wide receivers for Sunday's clash: Don Herrmann, Joel Parker and Rookie Rich Mauti. Saints' tight end James Thaxton has also played wide receiver and Thursday the Saints added rookie free agent Len Willis.

New Orleans also said Thursday that cornerback Ernie Jackson will miss Sunday's game due to injury . . . The club's other starting cornerback, Maurice Spencer, was injured before the regular season started and will miss the season so the Saints will send two rookie cornerbacks against the Bears Sunday.

The Saints also picked up veteran cornerback Jim Marsalis Thursday. Marsalis, a ninth-year pro, started the season with the Saints after sitting out last year with the Chiefs due to an injury. Marsalis was cut before the regular season began.

Wheeling kickers' slate marred by Barrington

by KEITH REINHEARD

Wheeling's high-flying soccer team nearly was ambushed at Barrington Thursday afternoon, countering an early first half goal with one of its own shortly into the second half and then holding on for a 1-1 tie.

It was the first blemish on the Wildcat slate. They had knocked Fremd last Tuesday for their seventh win in a row.

"Both goals were kinda fluky," said Barrington coach Mike Karon. "They were both knocked in while there was a lot of congestion around the nets. By and large the defenses dominated the game today."

The Broncos, now 5-2-1, hit paydirt just 2:33 into the contest on Josh Wilbert's unassisted score.

THE CATS countered at 8:44 of the second half on a goal by John Byckowski. The contest continued through the remainder of regulation time and two overtime periods without being further resolved.

In other MSL action Thursday Fremd shut out Buffalo Grove, Forest View knocked off Rolling Meadows, Elk Grove shackled Hoffman Estates and Arlington trimmed Hersey.

The Vikings rebounded from their setback to Wheeling with a 5-0 triumph over the Bison goalie John Milligan posting the shutout.

Tex Randall and Steve Orys each dumped in a pair of goals for the Vikes and Janney Stokes rounded out scoring.

Nick Racz broke up a 1-1 deadlock late in the first half and the Falcons charged on to a 4-1 verdict over the Mustangs. Marty Panczak had opened scoring for Forest View but Gary Cook knotted the game for Meadows.

RACZ THEN tallied twice in a row on assists by Willi Klein and Mike Hrbacek. Steve Hirsch had the final Falcon goal.

Dan Boutellier accounted for all the scoring in a 2-0 Grenadier win over the Hawks. Greg Wellman assisted on one goal and the other was unaided as Elk Grove upped their slate to 6-1 over-all.

The Cardinals opened up a three-goal lead on the visiting Huskies and then coasted to a 4-3 triumph to up their divisional record to 2-3-1.

Jeff Prelletz put Hersey on the scoreboard first, but Walt Noffsinger retaliated for the Cards with a pair of goals and Brian Wachlin also scored twice to make it a 4-1 contest.

JOHN MANTANES pushed in a pair of penalty shots later in the game to close the gap. Mantanes has scored in every Hersey game and now has a total of 14 goals on the over-all season.

In frosh-soph action the Huskies played to their fourth tie in seven league tries, deadlocking with the Redbirds at 1-1. Elk Grove topped Hoffman 2-1, Forest View nipped Meadows 2-0, Fremd stopped the Bison 4-1 and Barrington toppled the Wildcats 4-2.

Today's only scheduled contest sees Maine West entertaining Forest View. Saturday's action will be highlighted by a Fremd visit to Barrington while Palatine is hosted by Fenton and Maine West travels to Deerfield.

Bears trim Gilliam from squad and bench Clemons

by BOB GALLAS

Bears' coach Jack Pardee vowed some changes would be made this week and Thursday he made good his promise, cutting recently acquired wide receiver John Gilliam and announcing veteran safety Craig Clemons has been benched.

Gilliam, who was picked up as a free agent from Atlanta Sept. 14, had apparently seen his better days with the Minnesota Vikings and did not fit into Bear plans. He had been thrown to only once in two games and dropped that pass.

His departure came as about as much surprise as his arrival, considering Pardee said only Wednesday that Gilliam "will be playing quite a bit," though he did not say where.

CLEMONS IS IN his fifth season as starting strong safety and has played in 72 consecutive games to lead the club. However the Bears rank last in defense in the NFL after two games and Clemons has had trouble on coverages this season, though Pardee said Clemons has been playing "injured."

With the departure of Gilliam, the Bears have signed free agent Chuck Bradley, a third-year tight end who formerly played for San Diego and also the Southern California Sun in the defunct World Football League.

Craig Clemons

He's 6-6 and weighs 250 pounds.

Pardee soft-pedaled Clemons' demotion, saying the safety's ankle and thigh have been bothering him. "He's gone ahead and played but hasn't been 100 per cent," said Pardee.

Gary Fencik, who has done exceptionally well in two games filling in for the injured Doug Plank at free safety, will take over Clemons' spot this week and 4th year man Terry Schmidt will play at free safety. Plank is expected back for next week's game against the Rams and Pardee was asked if the switch this week was done with an eye on keeping Fencik in the lineup once Plank returns.

"YOU CAN BET it crossed our minds," said Pardee. Fencik, a second-year man from Barrington High School and Yale University, has 25 tackles in two game to lead the team.

"To a certain extent I'm sure he (Clemons) does't like the idea of not starting," said Pardee. "But he's had two of his best practices of the year this week. The pressure's off and he's been able to work on fundamentals more."

Pardee thinks the switch to Schmidt and Fencik in the defensive secondary will improve the club's pass defense. "With Terry in there we can change the defenses around more because Terry can cover the backs, slot men or wide receivers," Pardee said.

Gilliam, 32, was dropped after spending but 15 days on the Chicago roster. "He just wasn't accomplishing things he'd done earlier (in his career)," Pardee said. "It looked like the first week he was here he was gonna get there, but he didn't progress or surpass the players we already have."

BRADLEY IS expected to play on special teams, though probably only on the kickoff return team this week. Pardee is also trying to light a fire under his kickoff return and kickoff receiving teams, which have performed poorly in the first two games.

Rookie guard Ted Albrecht continues to work ahead of Jeff Sevy at tackle, in practice, though Pardee said Thursday that "no decision has been made" as to whether Sevy or Albrecht will start against New Orelans Sunday.

Sevy fell into disfavor when he failed to get down into the set position in the closing seconds of Sunday's game in St. Louis, and, as a result, time ran out. The Bears had moved into field goal range and might have tied the score had they been able to stop the clock with an incomplete pass. They lost 16-13.

That leaves the Saints with just three bonafide wide receivers for Sunday's clash: Don Herrmann, Joel Parker and Rookie Rich Mauti. Saints' tight end James Thaxton has also played wide receiver and Thursday the Saints added rookie free agent Len Willis.

New Orleans also said Thursday that cornerback Ernie Jackson will miss Sunday's game due to injury . . . The club's other starting cornerback, Maurice Spencer, was injured before the regular season started and will miss the season so the Saints will send two rookie cornerbacks against the Bears Sunday.

The Saints also picked up veteran cornerback Jim Marsalis Thursday. Marsalis, a ninth-year pro, started the season with the Saints after sitting out last year with the Chiefs due to an injury. Marsalis was cut before the regular season began.

Roberts dies on course he loved

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Clifford Roberts, who helped launch the prestigious Masters Golf Tournament 43 years ago and built it into one of the top four golf events in the world, committed suicide Thursday on the course he loved.

The body of the 84-year-old Roberts was found near Ike's Pond, named after the late President Eisenhower who played the course often and had a cottage erected for his use.

In ill health for several months, Roberts had shot himself in the head with a pistol.

Roberts had stepped down a year ago as chairman of the Masters but continued to direct the Augusta National Golf Club, where the tournament is held.

Roberts ran all aspects of the annual spring event, the first of the four major tourneys each year, with iron-fisted control. But Jack Nicklaus said on being informed of his death, "Mr. Roberts set the tone for tournament golf with his Masters. The standard and quality with which he conducted the Masters are unmatched anywhere."

Red Sox to be sold for $15 million

BOSTON — Haywood Sullivan, who caught for the Boston Red Sox two decades ago and former trainer Edward "Buddy" LeRoux Thursday announced an agreement for their 13-member group to purchase the American League team.

The sale, for an estimated $15 million, is expected to be finalized Oct. 31. He other 13 American League owners must ratify the purchase by a three-quarters vote.

Mrs. Jean Yawkey, one of the three members of a trust which has run the club since the death of her husband Thomas on July 9, 1976, joined the group as a limited partner after Sullivan and LeRoux made their offer on Sept. 1.

"The price was one factor in that decision and the fact that Mrs. Yawkey decided to join the group was another," said trust member Joseph LaCour Thursday. A noontime news conference was held at Fenway Park to announce the impending sale.

"We have to hammer out a contract for the sale, but for all intents it is sold. We do not anticipate any problem," said LaCour.

Douglass shakes slump, fires 66

NAPA, Calif. — Veteran Dale Douglass snapped out of a five-year slump with the best round he could remember in a long, long time — a six-under-par 65 — on Silverado's South Course Thursday for the first-round lead in the $200,000 Classic.

Douglass, 31, who has exempt status on the PGA tour because of a place in the top 50 money-winners of all time, had eight birdies and two bogeys on a card of 30-36 for a one-stroke lead over Larry Ziegler and Mac McLendon.

Ziegler and McLendon also played the South Course in the opening round for their 67s. Pat Fitzsimons, Gibby Gilbert and Jeff Mitchell had 68s on the same course, considered the easier of the two at Silverado, while Grier Jones had a 68 on the North Course to lay two shots off the lead.

Decision time for Patriots' stars

WASHINGTON — John Hannah and Leon Gray, two standout offensive linemen who left the New England Patriots in a contract dispute, said Thursday they would decide soon whether to return to the club, as the NFL's Player-Club Relations Committee suggested.

"I still have the option of retirement and I'll have to consider that," said Hannah, a 6-foot-2, 265-pound fifth-year guard from Albertville, Ala., where his family runs a farming business.

"My gut feeling is that I want to play football," said Gray, a 6-foot-3, 255-pound tackle, also in his fifth year. "But I just want to weigh my feelings and look at the whole thing objectively."

If Hannah and Gray don't return to the team by 5 p.m. next Tuesday, the Patriots, under orders from the committee, will be forced to place them on the retired list, making them ineligible to play in 1977.

Tanner, Borg team up for victory

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. — Roscoe Tanner grabbed the point lead in the $220,000 World Invitational Tennis Classic Thursday, teaming with Bjorn Borg for a 7-6, 5-7, 6-4 victory over John Newcombe and Vitas Gerulaitis in the men's doubles finals.

Wimbledon champion Virginia Wade downed Evonne Goolagong Cawley, 6-4, 6-7, 6-3, in the women's singles finals at the Sea Pines Racquet Club. But she trailed Tanner, who has three wins thus far in the tournament, in the over-all point standings.

The tournament consists of four men and four women players who compete with and against one another in singles, doubles and mixed doubles. The winner is decided on an over-all point basis for a prize of $50,000.

Roberts dies on course he loved

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Clifford Roberts, who helped launch the prestigious Masters Golf Tournament 43 years ago and built it into one of the top four golf events in the world, committed suicide Thursday on the course he loved.

The body of the 84-year-old Roberts was found near Ike's Pond, named after the late President Eisenhower who played the course often and had a cottage erected for his use.

In ill health for several months, Roberts had shot himself in the head with a pistol.

Roberts had stepped down a year ago as chairman of the Masters but continued to direct the Augusta National Golf Club, where the tournament is held.

Roberts ran all aspects of the annual spring event, the first of the four major tourneys each year, with iron-fisted control. But Jack Nicklaus said on being informed of his death, "Mr. Roberts set the tone for tournament golf with his Masters. The standard and quality with which he conducted the Masters are unmatched anywhere."

Red Sox to be sold for $15 million

BOSTON — Haywood Sullivan, who caught for the Boston Red Sox two decades ago and former trainer Edward "Buddy" LeRoux Thursday announced an agreement for their 13-member group to purchase the American League team.

The sale, for an estimated $15 million, is expected to be finalized Oct. 31. He other 13 American League owners must ratify the purchase by a three-quarters vote.

Mrs. Jean Yawkey, one of the three members of a trust which has run the club since the death of her husband Thomas on July 9, 1976, joined the group as a limited partner after Sullivan and LeRoux made their offer on Sept. 1.

"The price was one factor in that decision and the fact that Mrs. Yawkey decided to join the group was another," said trust member Joseph LaCour Thursday. A noontime news conference was held at Fenway Park to announce the impending sale.

"We have to hammer out a contract for the sale, but for all intents it is sold. We do not anticipate any problem," said LaCour.

Douglass shakes slump, fires 66

NAPA, Calif. — Veteran Dale Douglass snapped out of a five-year slump with the best round he could remember in a long, long time — a six-under-par 65 — on Silverado's South Course Thursday for the first-round lead in the $200,000 Classic.

Douglass, 31, who has exempt status on the PGA tour because of a place in the top 50 money-winners of all time, had eight birdies and two bogeys on a card of 30-36 for a one-stroke lead over Larry Ziegler and Mac McLendon.

Ziegler and McLendon also played the South Course in the opening round for their 67s. Pat Fitzsimons, Gibby Gilbert and Jeff Mitchell had 68s on the same course, considered the easier of the two at Silverado, while Grier Jones had a 68 on the North Course to lay two shots off the lead.

Decision time for Patriots' stars

WASHINGTON — John Hannah and Leon Gray, two standout offensive linemen who left the New England Patriots in a contract dispute, said Thursday they would decide soon whether to return to the club, as the NFL's Player-Club Relations Committee suggested.

"I still have the option of retirement and I'll have to consider that," said Hannah, a 6-foot-2, 265-pound fifth-year guard from Albertville, Ala., where his family runs a farming business.

"My gut feeling is that I want to play football," said Gray, a 6-foot-3, 255-pound tackle, also in his fifth year. "But I just want to weigh my feelings and look at the whole thing objectively."

If Hannah and Gray don't return to the team by 5 p.m. next Tuesday, the Patriots, under orders from the committee, will be forced to place them on the retired list, making them ineligible to play in 1977.

Tanner, Borg team up for victory

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. — Roscoe Tanner grabbed the point lead in the $220,000 World Invitational Tennis Classic Thursday, teaming with Bjorn Borg for a 7-6, 5-7, 6-4 victory over John Newcombe and Vitas Gerulaitis in the men's doubles finals.

Wimbledon champion Virginia Wade downed Evonne Goolagong Cawley, 6-4, 6-7, 6-3, in the women's singles finals at the Sea Pines Racquet Club. But she trailed Tanner, who has three wins thus far in the tournament, in the over-all point standings.

The tournament consists of four men and four women players who compete with and against one another in singles, doubles and mixed doubles. The winner is decided on an over-all point basis for a prize of $50,000.

A year's seasoning puts the Bulls in prime shape

Don Friske

Byline report

Except for the rookies, nothing much is new or different at the Bulls' preseason camp at the Angel Guardian gym in Chicago.

That's quite a twist from last September much to the delight and well-being of the players and their coach, Ed Badger.

To prepare for last season, the Bulls had to deal with a gathering of fresh faces. There were first-year players trying to make the transition from college to professional ball. There were shifted players from the defunct American Basketball Assn. trying to show they belonged in the NBA. There were veteran Bulls trying to become familiar with the new people.

AND ON TOP of all that, there was a new coach trying to establish his philosophies and ideas.

All that led to the confusion of a 13-game losing streak at the begining of the season. But when the Bulls got things together they stampeded and clawed their way into a playoff spot by winning 20 of their last 24 games.

"That made the summer more enjoyable, and we hope to pick up from where we left off," Badger said.

If a more relaxed atmosphere is any advantage, the Bulls should be able to come through for Badger at the outset of the 1977-78 season, which begins Oct. 18 in Cleveland.

THIS YEAR, there is no longer the anxiety-filled sessions at which veterans had to fight with rookies to convince Badger that they should remain on the roster.

"This year we know who will play and who will start," said guard Norm Van Lier. "We can look at practice from a whole different point of view. Knowing who will play makes a major difference. It's better than coming to practice in the dark all the time."

Badger said he hasn't really concentrated on specifics so far. But he added that he has been pleased with the offensive and defensive basics that his players have been working on.

"It's been a lot easier this year because we had the whole summer to prepare," Badger said.

MOST OF THE players on the team would point to lofty Artis Gilmore as the key to the Bulls' strong finish last spring. Like the rest, the 7-2 center had to find himself after switching from the ABA Kentucky Colonels the year before.

"Right now, I'm more solid than last year. I've been able to adjust better because the surroundings are a whole lot better," Gilmore said. "We're using the same system from last year, which helps. And that strong surge helps our confidence. It's a big plus for us because it lets the other teams know that we are capable of doing things."

Gilmore isn't the type to say that he was the big reason the Bulls made the playoffs last season. Instead, he'll point to the fact that some of the young players stepped into the lineup and met the professional challenge.

Like Scott May.

THE ROOKIE FORWARD missed the entire preseason last year as he fought off mononucleosis. When he finally made it into the lineup, the Bulls went 38-23 with May as a starter. He finished the year as the all-time leading scorer for a rookie in Bulls' history with 1,050 points.

"I think everybody on the team feels that we can have a great season this year, but I can't promise anything," the former Indiana All-American said. "I know what's going on now and I know the philosophy. I know what the coach expects of me, and that makes it more comfortable.

"The training camp has been pretty good this year. Everybody knows each other a little better, and the morale is really good."

Van Lier, who has been with the Bulls since the 1971-72 season, said he believes the biggest change from a year ago is organization.

"We're not like scrambled eggs now. Last year we didn't know one direction from the next," he said. "This is a young team, so there is still some adjusting to do. But there is a lot of togetherness, which you need on a young team."

Semipro hockey teams to face off Saturday

Semiprofessional hockey hits the Northwest suburbs Saturday evening as the Schaumburg Kings face off in Mid-America Conference play. The Kings face the South Flyers of Crestwood in their home opener at the Polar Dome, East Dundee. Game time is 7:20 p.m.

The Mid-America Conference is a six-team league composed of the leading non-professional hockey players in Illinois. In addition to the Schaumburg and Crestwood entries, the MAC fields teams from Chicago, Skokie, Zion and Waukegan. Each of the six teams is loaded with former college stars and graduates of top Junior A hockey leagues.

Mid-America teams play full 20-minute stop time periods with the ususal 15 minute intermissions between periods.

The Kings' home opener will salute amateur hockey players, high school age and younger. Players wearing their hockey club jacket to the opener will receive free season passes to all 10 King home games.

General admission to each game is $2 for adults and $1 for children under 12. The Kings also have special fund-raising packages for youth and community groups, and general admission rates for groups of 10 and more.

'Mini-Franco' dazzles Maine West opponents

by KEITH REINHARD

There really isn't any comparison between Franco Harris and Bob Aslan.

Everyone knows Franco isn't a kicker.

Aslan obviously is. The Maine West senior included a pair of conversion boots among his 20-point performance last weekend as the Warriors thumped Waukegan East. The scoring spurt moved him into the first place in the Herald area point parade.

ASLAN PICKED up the comparison to the Pittsburgh Steeler great when he grew a beard this past summer. "Maybe a mini-Franco," explained his coach, Dan Mortier, about his 5-10, 170-pound scoring machine.

"While Bob isn't real big, he has everything else going for him," Mortier continued. "He has a sixth sense about running with the ball. He's elusive and great on the breakaways and yet he knows how to dig in for those tough short yards up the middle."

The Maine West pilot pointed out that Aslan's exceptional speed is for real too. "Bob's a sprinter on the track team and qualified for state last year in the 440 relay."

And don't forget about the kicking. Aslan had a 35-yard field goal wiped out last week but couldn't complain. A Waukegan East penalty on the play allowed the Warriors to pick up a first down and they went on to score a touchdown instead.

MORTIER SUMMED up Franco . . . er . . . Bob's abilities by noting,

Bob Aslan

"He's a good student and a team leader. I wish I could say that I've taught him to be a top-notch ball carrier but his kind of talent is difficult to teach . . . it's a very natural thing with him."

Which is why there's nothing unnatural about Bob Aslan being the No. 3 rusher in the area right now, and the number one scorer.

Hoffman, Prospect teams gear up for harrier duel

by ART MUGALIAN

As soon as Hoffman Estates and Prospect High won their Mid-Suburban South boys cross country meets Thursday, the psychological warfare began in preparation for next week's Hawk-Knight duel to decide the South title.

"Prospect is in another league — they're really tough," said Hoffman coach Jim Swift after his Hawks had shut out Rolling Meadows, 15-50, for their fourth straight South victory.

"We're going to give it a shot, but Prospect is a classy team," Swift said. "We're just happy to be where we're in a position to have it come down to this. Who'd have thought we'd be 4-0 at this point in the season?"

PROSPECT, MEANWHILE, was claiming its fourth consecutive Brown Jug for beating Arlington, 24-35, in a crossover meet against the North Division Cardinals.

"This is the toughest we've run all year," said Prospect coach Joe Wanner.

But Wanner wasn't discounting Hoffman, especially since the Hawks are defending South champs. "There's no way we can run poor and beat Hoffman," Wanner said. "I think we can put three guys on them, but I wouldn't be surprised if they put six on our fifth man."

Hoffman Estates, led by junior Joel Storm's 16:02, put nine runners on Meadows' first man, all within :38. Five of the nine Hawks are juniors and one is a sophomore.

"WE'RE A VERY young team," Swift said. "I really don't think Wanner's too worried about us."

Prospect's Mark Smith came within :15 of the course record at Pioneer Park, winning in 15:16. Teammate Ken Wetendorf was second, followed by Arlington's Jim Lear, Pete Long and Tom Tremblay. Prospect had the next six finishers, though.

In other MSL meets Thursday, Fremd whipped Wheeling, 20-43, Palatine beat Buffalo Grove, 16-43, Schaumburg blanked Elk Grove, 15-50, Forest View tamed Conant, 15-45, and Hersey beat Barrington, 19-36.

St. Viator won its third straight ESCC dual meet, 20-40, over St. Patrick as Dave Efken and Steve Klimkowski finished one-two for the Lions.

NORTH DIVISION rivals Palatine and Fremd stayed on a collision course for their Oct. 13 showdown with easy wins. Palatine's victory over Buffalo Grove was accomplished on the strength of first-to-fourth efforts by Jon Dahlgren, Chuck Elliott, Tom Johnson and Jim Lancaster. Kevin Nikolai and Jon Laegeler didn't run for the Pirates.

Buffalo Grove's first man was Dan Fox in fifth place. Bison standout Joe Schmidt was out of town.

Fremd won its 63rd straight dual meet with its victory over Wheeling despite a first-place performance by Wildcat Ben Sanchez. The Wheeling senior broke his own home-course record by running three miles in 14:56.6.

But Fremd was too much for Wheeling, placing eight Vikings in front of the Wildcats' next man, led by Tom Ross and Ed Martinez in 15:06 and 15:12.

Schaumburg bunched 10 runners on Elk Grove's first finisher, led by junior transfer Tom Placek in 14:53. Placek, who took a couple of wrong turns, led teammates Keith Mazikowski and Jack Breen into the chute.

Forest View, like Schaumburg 2-2 in the South, took care of Conant by placing five runners in front of the Cougars' top man. Mike Yaccino was the individual winner.

Rich Rieger and Steve Johnson beat Barrington's Dave Trestik as Hersey evened up at 2-2 in the North.

Forest View girls hand Prospect volleyball loss

by JEFF NORDLUND

With two straight game victories, Forest View handed Prospect its first Mid-Suburban League girls volleyball match loss of the season Thursday.

After handing three straight MSL South Division opponents losses, Prospect went down to defeat as the Falcons (2-1) took the first two games 20-16, 20-12.

Falcon coach Denise Van Huele credited the triumph to solid, all-around team work. Joan Russo was strong serving, while Cathy Suchecki was effective setting. Defensively, Forest View was paced by the play of Debbie Porto, Holly Borchart and Deb Duncan.

IN OTHER MSL action Thursday, two teams, Hersey and Rolling Meadows, remained undefeated. Hersey stopped Palatine 20-12, 20-12, and Meadows edged Schaumburg 20-9, 13-20, 20-17.

Barrington, also undefeated in MSL play, blasted Elk Grove in a crossover match 20-5, 20-6. Arlington tagged Fremd 20-12, 20-6, while Wheeling slipped by Buffalo Grove 20-15, 15-20, 20-12.

The spiking of Janice Labellarte, Patty Pallas, Nina Stanton and Debbie Barnd paced Hersey (3-0) to its win over Palatine (2-2). Peggy Munson was the top performer for the Pirates.

Sue Vlamis and Joann Wissen paced Meadows (4-0) over Schaumburg (1-2) in the Mustangs' three-game match victory. Lisa Jaworski and Darlene Kubinski spearheaded the Saxons' attack.

THE EXCELLENT defense of Barrington's Terry Bagley, Jan Walstrom, Catrina McClanahan, Jan Schmidt and Carrie Prewitt boosted the Broncos (3-0) over Elk Grove (1-2). Kim Richardson's serving and spiking paced the Grenadiers.

The outstanding defense of Sandra Raney helped Wheeling (2-1) over Buffalo Grove (0-4). Laura Kubik turned in a strong performance for the Bison.

Nancy Post helped Hoffman Estates (1-2) defeat Conant (0-4). A score was not available for the match. In a Central Suburban match Maine West defeated Maine East 20-18, 20-17.

Like other Rams QBs, Ron was aided by divorce

Jim Murray

Administrations come and administrations go, the years go by, new nations spring up, cures are found for diseases, droughts strike and the world changes. But the Los Angeles Rams don't. The Rams always have a Great Quarterback Controversy. They arrange it that way.

Even back in the B. C. (Before Carroll) days, when they had two of the greatest quarterbacks in the history of the game, Bob Waterfield and Dutch Van Brocklin, Hall of Famers both, fistfights used to break out in bars over which should play.

When Waterfield quit, the club brought in Billy Wade to annoy Van Brocklin. Dutch forced them to trade him. To Philadelphia.

THEN THEY BROUGHT in Roman Gabriel to pester Billy Wade, who left them for Chicago. They they brought in Billy Munson to pester Roman Gabriel and, when that didn't work, they brought in John Hadl. Roman left them. For Philadelphia.

Then they brought in James Harris to keep Hadl from feeling loved. When Hadl left, they brought over Pat Haden. When Harris left, and before Haden could get used to the chair, they brought in Joe Namath. The Rams are like the manager who jerks a starting pitcher every time the other guys get two loud fouls. Ram quarterbacks have the life expectancy of an amoeba. Lots of teams put up with bad quarterbacks year after year. The Rams won't even put up with good ones.

In 1973 the Rams drafted a young quarterback that most of their scouts thought would make the world forget Sammy Baugh. Ron Jaworski could throw a football 85 yards on the fly, and through a brick wall. He could scramble, read a blitz or lead a huddle. Most of all, he was enthusiastic. He led the league in cheers.

When they told him he was going to be No. 1, he believed them. When they traded away John Hadl in mid-1974, Ron thought his time had come. Henry VIII's wives probably felt that way.

TOWARD THE END of the 1975 season, Ron Jaworski thought he had arrived. It was the classic Broadway musical plot. He went out there an understudy — and came back a star. When Harris got hurt in the first quarter of the Green Bay game, Jaworski went in and completed 14 of 24 passes for 174 yards and a 22-5 win. The next week he started against the Pittsburgh Steelers, no less, the soon-to-be Super-Bowl champions, and beat them 10-3. The following week, in the playoff game against St. Louis, Jaworski was 12 for 23 in passes as the Rams routed the Cardinals, 35-23.

The next week, in the championship game, Jaworski didn't start. The Rams couldn't shake their bigamous habits. The Rams were every inch a sailor. A quarterback in every port. The still-injured James Harris started — with predictable results, Dallas 37, Rams 7.

So when Ron Jaworski reported the following season and found a new blond on the premises, Pat Haden, he served notice he was playing out his option. This earned him a lively season holding for placekicks and playing the enemy quarterback in practices. Then the Rams finally made good on their prenuptial promise. They made Jaworski a No. 1 quarterback. For the Philadelphia Eagles. Ron was following a well-worn Ram quarterback path.

THE DIVORCE IN this case was a little more messy. Ron Jaworski left no statements saying they were parting "the best of friends." In fact, he accused Ram owner Carroll Rosenbloom of playing Pat Haden because he looked better on magazine covers and, as a Rhodes Scholar, understood Latin verbs better. Haden didn't win the job in Fullerton, he won it at Oxford, Jaworski complained.

Ron Jaworski returned to the Coliseum and for the first time in his career there, he was free to throw a couple of incompletions without coming out of the game on the end of a hook. The Eagles have given him the football and a five-year contract and dealt off his competition (except for an overage Gabriel, who is backup only). Over on the other side of the field, it was Pat Haden's turn on the bench.

Is Jaworski bitter? "If you mean angry, no, I've mellowed," Ron said. "But if you mean do I still feel what was done to me wasn't justified, well, yes, I still feel that way."

Does he believe owner Rosenbloom rather than the coaching staff relegated him to holding placekicks last season? "I know it was. Coach Knox told me so and I respect Chuck Knox." How did it happen? "Just before the Detroit game, I asked him why I wasn't starting. He told me the situation was out of his hands. That he had his instructions. I mean, I could understand it. He has to hold his job. But there was no question this was a political decision. I roomed with James Harris for four years and we used to compare notes on what was said to each of us. The Rams made a mistake in letting two quarterbacks room together."

So, the present Rams turmoil is no surprise to him? "I'm staying out of that," Jaworski said hastily. "They've got a great bunch of guys over there and a lot of players I'm friendly with." But he acted like a guy in a movie who suddenly feels this is where he came in.

(c) 1977, Los Angeles Times.

MARK-ED MAN. Barrington's Mark Gulas (47) has difficulty trying to dribble around Hersey's John Mantanes (28) during a Mid-Suburban League North Division soccer battle on the Bronco field. Mantanes scored the lone Huskie goal in a 2-1 setback to Barrington.

Prep football association protests Friday play-off

High school athletic programs will suffer a significant loss of revenue from telecasts of professional baseball games Oct. 7 and 14, according to Brice Durbin, executive director of the National Federation of State High School Associations.

Durbin has contacted the commissioner of major league baseball to protest the telecasting of the third game of the American League playoffs Oct. 7, and the third World Series game Oct. 14.

"Friday night is the traditional time for high school football games," Durbin said in a Sept. 9 letter to the commissioner, "and generally, football provides the major source of revenue to support the entire interscholastic program."

NATIONAL COACHES Day is Oct. 7, and schools across the country will be honoring high school coaches that night. The scheduling of National Coaches Day on a Friday and the honoring of coaches that night just emphasizes how important Friday nights are to high school athletics and how damaging the baseball telecasts may be.

Most interscholastic baseball programs are not self-sufficient financially and depend on revenue from football programs to exist. Past experience proves that when professional sports are televised on Friday nights, attendance at high school events is reduced and, consequently, so are revenues.

The protection of Friday night interscholastic events is so critical to the welfare of interscholastic programs that Congress has legislated that professional football games may not be aired from stations with 75 miles of a high school football game. "We have a legitimate and well-recognized need to protect Friday night high school football games from telecasts of professional events," Durbin said.

The National Federation's membership, which is a high school association in each state and represents 20,400 schools nationwide, including 14,000 schools which sponsor baseball and 15,000 which sponsor football, is engaged in a letter-writing campaign to have the Oct. 7 and 14 telecasts changed and to have such scheduling avoided in the future.

Harper hopes to shake off slump

When the Harper Hawks play host to Thornton Saturday at 1:30 p.m., coach John Eliasik will be watching to see if his team can shake a two-game offensive slump.

"Thornton's pass defense is a little weak, but they are big up front," Eliasik said. "They have a good running attack and they don't throw much."

Passing has been a problem for the Hawks in their last two games. Eliasik is hoping his offensive line can give the quarterback enough protection so that he has time to penetrate the weak Thornton secondary.

"We always like to have a balanced offense, but so far we haven't been able to count on either passing or running," Eliasik said. "The key problem has been turnovers on offense."

In three games, Hawk quarterbacks have thrown seven interceptions, which Eliasik sees as part of his young team's "greenness."

The Hawk coach figures his offense will get better, if they can hold onto the ball long enough to show some improvement.

Jim Murray

Administrations come and administrations go, the years go by, new nations spring up, cures are found for diseases, droughts strike and the world changes. But the Los Angeles Rams don't. The Rams always have a Great Quarterback Controversy. They arrange it that way.

Even back in the B. C. (Before Carroll) days, when they had two of the greatest quarterbacks in the history of the game, Bob Waterfield and Dutch Van Brocklin, Hall of Famers both, fistfights used to break out in bars over which should play.

When Waterfield quit, the club brought in Billy Wade to annoy Van Brocklin. Dutch forced them to trade him. To Philadelphia.

THEN THEY BROUGHT in Roman Gabriel to pester Billy Wade, who left them for Chicago. They they brought in Billy Munson to pester Roman Gabriel and, when that didn't work, they brought in John Hadl. Roman left them. For Philadelphia.

Then they brought in James Harris to keep Hadl from feeling loved. When Hadl left, they brought over Pat Haden. When Harris left, and before Haden could get used to the chair, they brought in Joe Namath. The Rams are like the manager who jerks a starting pitcher every time the other guys get two loud fouls. Ram quarterbacks have the life expectancy of an amoeba. Lots of teams put up with bad quarterbacks year after year. The Rams won't even put up with good ones.

In 1973 the Rams drafted a young quarterback that most of their scouts thought would make the world forget Sammy Baugh. Ron Jaworski could throw a football 85 yards on the fly, and through a brick wall. He could scramble, read a blitz or lead a huddle. Most of all, he was enthusiastic. He led the league in cheers.

When they told him he was going to be No. 1, he believed them. When they traded away John Hadl in mid-1974, Ron thought his time had come. Henry VIII's wives probably felt that way.

TOWARD THE END of the 1975 season, Ron Jaworski thought he had arrived. It was the classic Broadway musical plot. He went out there an understudy — and came back a star. When Harris got hurt in the first quarter of the Green Bay game, Jaworski went in and completed 14 of 24 passes for 174 yards and a 22-5 win. The next week he started against the Pittsburgh Steelers, no less, the soon-to-be Super-Bowl champions, and beat them 10-3. The following week, in the playoff game against St. Louis, Jaworski was 12 for 23 in passes as the Rams routed the Cardinals, 35-23.

The next week, in the championship game, Jaworski didn't start. The Rams couldn't shake their bigamous habits. The Rams were every inch a sailor. A quarterback in every port. The still-injured James Harris started — with predictable results, Dallas 37, Rams 7.

So when Ron Jaworski reported the following season and found a new blond on the premises, Pat Haden, he served notice he was playing out his option. This earned him a lively season holding for placekicks and playing the enemy quarterback in practices. Then the Rams finally made good on their prenuptial promise. They made Jaworski a No. 1 quarterback. For the Philadelphia Eagles. Ron was following a well-worn Ram quarterback path.

THE DIVORCE IN this case was a little more messy. Ron Jaworski left no statements saying they were parting "the best of friends." In fact, he accused Ram owner Carroll Rosenbloom of playing Pat Haden because he looked better on magazine covers and, as a Rhodes Scholar, understood Latin verbs better. Haden didn't win the job in Fullerton, he won it at Oxford, Jaworski complained.

Ron Jaworski returned to the Coliseum and for the first time in his career there, he was free to throw a couple of incompletions without coming out of the game on the end of a hook. The Eagles have given him the football and a five-year contract and dealt off his competition (except for an overage Gabriel, who is backup only). Over on the other side of the field, it was Pat Haden's turn on the bench.

Is Jaworski bitter? "If you mean angry, no, I've mellowed," Ron said. "But if you mean do I still feel what was done to me wasn't justified, well, yes, I still feel that way."

Does he believe owner Rosenbloom rather than the coaching staff relegated him to holding placekicks last season? "I know it was. Coach Knox told me so and I respect Chuck Knox." How did it happen? "Just before the Detroit game, I asked him why I wasn't starting. He told me the situation was out of his hands. That he had his instructions. I mean, I could understand it. He has to hold his job. But there was no question this was a political decision. I roomed with James Harris for four years and we used to compare notes on what was said to each of us. The Rams made a mistake in letting two quarterbacks room together."

So, the present Rams turmoil is no surprise to him? "I'm staying out of that," Jaworski said hastily. "They've got a great bunch of guys over there and a lot of players I'm friendly with." But he acted like a guy in a movie who suddenly feels this is where he came in.

Prep football association protests Friday play-off

High school athletic programs will suffer a significant loss of revenue from telecasts of professional baseball games Oct. 7 and 14, according to Brice Durbin, executive director of the National Federation of State High School Associations.

Durbin has contacted the commissioner of major league baseball to protest the telecasting of the third game of the American League playoffs Oct. 7, and the third World Series game Oct. 14.

"Friday night is the traditional time for high school football games," Durbin said in a Sept. 9 letter to the commissioner, "and generally, football provides the major source of revenue to support the entire interscholastic program."

NATIONAL COACHES Day is Oct. 7, and schools across the country will be honoring high school coaches that night. The scheduling of National Coaches Day on a Friday and the honoring of coaches that night just emphasizes how important Friday nights are to high school athletics and how damaging the baseball telecasts may be.

Most interscholastic baseball programs are not self-sufficient financially and depend on revenue from football programs to exist. Past experience proves that when professional sports are televised on Friday nights, attendance at high school events is reduced and, consequently, so are revenues.

The protection of Friday night interscholastic events is so critical to the welfare of interscholastic programs that Congress has legislated that professional football games may not be aired from stations with 75 miles of a high school football game. "We have a legitimate and well-recognized need to protect Friday night high school football games from telecasts of professional events," Durbin said.

The National Federation's membership, which is a high school association in each state and represents 20,400 schools nationwide, including 14,000 schools which sponsor baseball and 15,000 which sponsor football, is engaged in a letter-writing campaign to have the Oct. 7 and 14 telecasts changed and to have such scheduling avoided in the future.

Harper hopes to shake off slump

When the Harper Hawks play host to Thornton Saturday at 1:30 p.m., coach John Eliasik will be watching to see if his team can shake a two-game offensive slump.

"Thornton's pass defense is a little weak, but they are big up front," Eliasik said. "They have a good running attack and they don't throw much."

Passing has been a problem for the Hawks in their last two games. Eliasik is hoping his offensive line can give the quarterback enough protection so that he has time to penetrate the weak Thornton secondary.

"We always like to have a balanced offense, but so far we haven't been able to count on either passing or running," Eliasik said. "The key problem has been turnovers on offense."

In three games, Hawk quarterbacks have thrown seven interceptions, which Eliasik sees as part of his young team's "greenness."

The Hawk coach figures his offense will get better, if they can hold onto the ball long enough to show some improvement.

'77 marks return of the fullback

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Charlie Weber was plenty nervous Sept. 10 after-sitting out his sophomore season to preserve the year of football eligibility at the Univerity of Illinois.

On his first carry against Michigan, the ball flew wildly out of his arms as he smacked into linebacker Ron Simpkins and bounded upfield to Wolverine cornerback Mike Jolly.

"Yeah, I was nervous," admits the blond, lantern-jawed Illini junior fullback from Elgin Larkin High School. "I wasn't even thinking abut fumbling. Then it happened."

MICHIGAN QUICKLY capitalized for its second TD in the closing minutes of the first quarter, erasing a 3-0 Illini lead and setting a 37-9 runaway in motion.

Weber hasn't fumbled since. And when he rambled through a leaky Stanford defense for 103 yards Saturday, it marked the first plus-100 performance by an Illini fullback since Steve Greene did it in the 1974 opener. The span covers 34 games in which no U of I fullback reached three figures.

This is a sad commentary for a school that once displayed musclemen Ray Nitschke and Bill Brown in the power spot, launched Jim Grabowski to two 1,000-plus seasons (1964-65) and featured pile-driving Rich Johnson shortly thereafter (973 yards in 1968).

Fullbacks were at the top of Illinois' ground-gaining statistics nine times in 12 seasons from 1957 through 1968, and fullback Mike Navarro was just a yard shy of sophomore halfback John Wilson, 543 to 542, in 1971.

But since that time, the fullback has fallen from favor in the Illini attack. Last year, in a modern low, starting fullback Larry Schultz carried just 59 times in 11 games, little more than five carries per game or one-plus per quarter.

Gary Moeller, he of the Ohio-Michigan background, set about the job of changing that.

"YOU HAVE TO establish the fullback to make the option offense go," said Moeller as six fullback candidates lined up for the mid-August picture day. Juniors Weber and Mike Collins, the top two last spring, headed the sextet, that included junior Rawn Lindsey, sophomore John Bell and freshmen John Gillen, the St. Viator High School All-Stater, and Wayne Strader.

Weber held his position as Lindsey departed, Bell's knee failed to respond, Gillen switched to linebacker and Collins sustained a linering head injuury. After surviving the opening jitters, he and Strader formed a 1-2 punch with Mark Steger, walkon son of former Illini fullback Ruck Steger, in the No. 3 slot.

"I felt it was a good move to redshirt last year," said Weber, a premed (biology) student who plans to be a doctor.

"Larry Schulz had had a good spring and he was clearly No. 1. We had plenty of people at the position."

Coach Bob Blackman liked Weber's speed and determination, and was hopeful another year might beef him up to Big Ten proportions. Weber hasn't gotten any bigger (he calls his listed weight of 198 "a bit high") but he is clearly improved.

"Sure, there is something magical about 100 yards," he went on. "We've made everyone aware of the fullback position on this team. Maybe this will open it up for the rest of the guys.

"We have a balanced offense. We need the inside game to open up the outside. It works both ways."

Loren Tate

WEBER WAS OPENLY upset about the 37-24 loss at Stanford. He was in better position than anyone to see the weaknesses in the Cardinal defense.

"We saw from the Colorado and Tulane films that we could make the tackle trap work against Stanford, and it was there right from the start. Both of our tackles — Rich Grimmett and Dennis Ashlock — did a good job blocking it, and Stanford's secondary didn't react as fast as some others. I think we could have run it all day."

As it developed, Illinois set a school record for first downs with 27 but fell too far behind during a mid-game siege of turnovers: interception, fumbled kickoff return, bobbled scrimmage run and muffed punt reception.

"We beat ourselves," said Weber. "We need to bounce back this week. The mental part of the game is important, and we need a win to get set for the remainder of the season. Syracuse will come in here fired up after beating Washington." Syracuse will arrive with a new respect for the Illini fullback spot. The 151 yards gained by the Weber-Strader duo put the position back in the Illini forefront after a long absence.

Best medicine for car may be nice, long drive

Doyle K. Getter

Your auto and you

I have a 1973 Dodge Charger with the 318 V-8. My spark plugs foul up at approximately 500 to 700 miles, when I have to clean them. I use the plugs recommended, have 28,000 miles on the car and oil consumption is normal. My round trip to work is about one mile.

Edward Sam, Buffalo, N.Y.

Driving only a half mile to work you are not driving enough to warm up the engine and the choke isn't coming off, resulting in too rich a mixture. If the choke and vacuum kick are properly adjusted, you will just have to give that car a good drive at least once a week to burn off and clean your plugs. A nice drive every Sunday would be the best medicine for your car.

I have a 1976 Ford Granada sedan with air conditioning. Whenever I slow down to 10 miles an hour or less and then step on the gas, the car will start to buck. It happens on and off on certain days. Whenever I've taken it back to the dealer, it always runs fine. Do you have an answer for this problem?

Vincent DeStefano, Springfield, Mass.

You did not say whether you have an automatic or manual transmission. If it's a manual transmission, you are not down-shifting properly at slow speeds.If it is an automatic, first look for an internal carburetor problem. The needle and seat may be sticking. Also have the service manager check to be sure the automatic is going back to low gear at the proper shift points.

There is a terrible wind noise in our 1977 Buick, starting at 40 miles an hour and getting much worse at 55 on the highway. It really sounds as if the windows are slightly open but they are rolled up tight, even to the point of rolling up the winodws first and then closing the door. The dealer says ther is nothing he can do.

Mrs. J. G. D., Longwood, Fla.

Proper alignment of the doors and glass should solve the problem. If your dealer's shop can't get them properly aligned, ask him to ask for assistance from Buick's zone service representative the next time he is around.

The gasoline and temperature guages on my daughter's 1967 Plymouth are acting erratically. The dealer told her it would take new fuel gauges for the dash and tank, a new temperature gauge and a new voltage limiter. With labor, it would come to $73.88. Is that excessive?

Wallace W. West, Peoria, Ill.

You might find some other mechanic willing to do the job for less but it's a job that has to be done. I imagine the voltage limiter "blew" first and that overloaded the gauges. The only item I would question would be the fuel gauge in the tank. Why not have the other things done first and you may find the tank gauge was not damaged.

Mercedes: perfection has its price

by DOYLE K. GETTER

Mercedes-Benz has earned its formidable reputation for excellence by striving to build, without compromise, the most nearly perfect car that it can within manageable limits of cost.

Perfection, or at least a reasonable approximation, is not bought cheaply, hence the $26,110 price for the Mercedes-Benz 450 SEL four-door sedan.

It is solidly engineered, safe, fast and quiet. The ride is firm by American "luxury" standards but never harsh, even at high speeds over bad roads. The steering is precise and power-assisted but the driver, who must provide 30 per cent of the effort, always has enough feel of the road through the steering system to know when the car is under control.

Although the car is heavy, 4,080 pounds, its four-wheel disc brakes will stop the car in a straight line in 170 feet. The power brake booster provides three-fourths of the effort needed for braking. Warning lights tell you when the brake pads or brake fluid need to be replaced.

I CLOCKED ZERO to 50 miles an hour in 7.5 seconds and 30 to 50 miles an hour in 4.2 seconds.

In mileage tests, I averaged 12.9 miles per gallon in city driving and 18.1 miles per gallon on the highway at 55 miles an hour. Mercedes-Benz will have to improve those figures if it continues to export this model for very long.

The 450 SEL is the largest car that Daimler-Benz of Germany exports to this country. It is 209.4 inches in length on a 116.7 inch wheelbase and will seat five adults comfortably.

Almost everything on the base car is standard equipment, including the bi-level climate control system that maintains a seleted temperature the year around, heating, cooling and dehumidifying as needed.

Ask Andy

Animated films require talent and patience

Andy sends a World Book Year Book to Rosanne Suk, 14, of St. Catharines, Ontario, Canada, for her question:

HOW ARE ANIMATED MOVIES MADE?

Walt Disney released the first full-length animated cartoon motion picture ever made. The year was 1937 and the movie was called "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." It became one of the world's most popular films. Disney followed it with the popular "Pinocchio" in 1940, "Fantasia" the same year, "Dumbo" in 1941, "Bambi" in 1942, "Cinderella" in 1950 and "The Lady and the Tramp" in 1955.

Animated movies are made by drawing a series of pictures, photographing them and then showing the sequence with a motion picture projector. A full-length animated feature motion picture can require as many as a million separate drawings.

After a story is selected — often based on a children's favorite fairy tale or classic book — an outline is made on what is called a storyboard. Both writers and artists lay out the action of the script and decide how the action of the story will progress. The board looks very much like a gigantic comic strip.

Once the storyboard has been approved by the director and the top production people, the music and the dialogue of the motion picture are recorded. Music is composed to meet the demands of the action of the story.

The animated picture is then broken into scenes and artists and director determine how the settings will look and how each character will act and appear. Layout artists then draw the key elements while background artists and animators go to work in their areas.

Animators must create the exact number of drawings required to picture each word spoken. For a character to say "cheers," for example, might require a total of eight frames. The animator must then make eight drawings in which the mouth moves in sequences to form the spoken word.

After the animator has completed his drawings, other artists trace them onto sheets of transparent celluloid that are called cels. The cels are then sent to artists in the painting department where just the right colors are added on the reserve side of each cel.

The final version of an animated movie that you finally see on a motion picture screen or on TV requires the teamwork of a lot of artistic people.

Andy sends the 1977 World Book Science Year Annual to Victoria Figueroa, 12, of Youngstown, Ohio, for her question:

WHAT IS EPILEPSY?

Epilepsy is a disorder of some nerve cells in the brain. An epileptic seizure happens when these certain cells suddenly release a large burst of electrical energy.

The brain normally produces some electrical energy in its cells and it flows through the nervous system to activate muscles. In the brain of an epileptic patient, sometimes there is a failure to limit or control this release of energy.

Patients with epilepsy can suffer seizures of varying degree at almost any time. Some people have frequent attacks while others have them only rarely. Most have no direct relationship to the emotional state or the time of the day.

Doctors don't know what causes epilepsy. They treat and control the disorder with drugs.

Send your question on a post card to Ask Andy in care of The Daily Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Hts., Ill. 60006, making sure to include your name, age and address. Entries are open to girls and boys 7 to 17.

Oswald and James Jacoby

Win at bridge

If West could see all the cards he would open a spade or heart against three notrump. Not being clairvoyant, he opened the four of diamonds.

South won with the king over East's 10 and led a club. West rose with the king and now saw that a second diamond lead would be a give up play, since South was marked with the ace and queen of that suit. He also saw a chance to shut that club suit out by leading a heart and he led the right one. He planked down the king of that suit.

This gave South an extra heart trick, but it cost him four club tricks and four for one is a pretty good trade.

South had to win with dummy's ace. Then he cleared the clubs.

West led a second diamond. South still had a chance for his contract. Maybe that queen of spades would be an entry to dummy. He led a low spade and played dummy's queen. East produced the king and South was held to seven tricks. Three hearts, three diamonds and one spade.

Win at bridge

Diamonds turn to paste

If West could see all the cards he would open a spade or heart against three notrump. Not being clairvoyant, he opened the four of diamonds.

South won with the king over East's 10 and led a club. West rose with the king and now saw that a second diamond lead would be a give up play, since South was marked with the ace and queen of that suit. He also saw a chance to shut that club suit out by leading a heart and he led the right one. He planked down the king of that suit.

This gave South an extra heart trick, but it cost him four club tricks and four for one is a pretty good trade.

South had to win with dummy's ace. Then he cleared the clubs.

West led a second diamond. South still had a chance for his contract. Maybe that queen of spades would be an entry to dummy. He led a low spade and played dummy's queen. East produced the king and South was held to seven tricks. Three hearts, three diamonds and one spade.

Ask Andy

Animated films require talent and patience

Andy sends a World Book Year Book to Rosanne Suk, 14, of St. Catharines, Ontario, Canada, for her question:

HOW ARE ANIMATED MOVIES MADE?

Walt Disney released the first full-length animated cartoon motion picture ever made. The year was 1937 and the movie was called "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." It became one of the world's most popular films. Disney followed it with the popular "Pinocchio" in 1940, "Fantasia" the same year, "Dumbo" in 1941, "Bambi" in 1942, "Cinderella" in 1950 and "The Lady and the Tramp" in 1955.

Animated movies are made by drawing a series of pictures, photographing them and then showing the sequence with a motion picture projector. A full-length animated feature motion picture can require as many as a million separate drawings.

After a story is selected — often based on a children's favorite fairy tale or classic book — an outline is made on what is called a storyboard. Both writers and artists lay out the action of the script and decide how the action of the story will progress. The board looks very much like a gigantic comic strip.

Once the storyboard has been approved by the director and the top production people, the music and the dialogue of the motion picture are recorded. Music is composed to meet the demands of the action of the story.

The animated picture is then broken into scenes and artists and director determine how the settings will look and how each character will act and appear. Layout artists then draw the key elements while background artists and animators go to work in their areas.

Animators must create the exact number of drawings required to picture each word spoken. For a character to say "cheers," for example, might require a total of eight frames. The animator must then make eight drawings in which the mouth moves in sequences to form the spoken word.

After the animator has completed his drawings, other artists trace them onto sheets of transparent celluloid that are called cels. The cels are then sent to artists in the painting department where just the right colors are added on the reserve side of each cel.

The final version of an animated movie that you finally see on a motion picture screen or on TV requires the teamwork of a lot of artistic people.

Andy sends the 1977 World Book Science Year Annual to Victoria Figueroa, 12, of Youngstown, Ohio, for her question:

WHAT IS EPILEPSY?

Epilepsy is a disorder of some nerve cells in the brain. An epileptic seizure happens when these certain cells suddenly release a large burst of electrical energy.

The brain normally produces some electrical energy in its cells and it flows through the nervous system to activate muscles. In the brain of an epileptic patient, sometimes there is a failure to limit or control this release of energy.

Patients with epilepsy can suffer seizures of varying degree at almost any time. Some people have frequent attacks while others have them only rarely. Most have no direct relationship to the emotional state or the time of the day.

Doctors don't know what causes epilepsy. They treat and control the disorder with drugs.

Send your question on a post card to Ask Andy in care of The Daily Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Hts., Ill. 60006, making sure to include your name, age and address. Entries are open to girls and boys 7 to 17.

Some seniors simply won't act their age

(They prefer Acting Up!)

Marcie Telander conducts a chorus of talking people.

by LAURA SCHMALBACH

Estelle Jeral, a retired bookkeeper, was up to her ears in boredom. Six months of forced vacation meant little after a lifetime of working, and she needed something more than her husband and home in Skokie to take up the slack.

That was in December 1976. A month later, a friend convinced her to sign up for a dramatics class sponsored by the Skokie Senior Citizens Arts Council. The class was expanding and hoped to take its improvisational approach to local community groups. Leaders Marcie Telander and Vivian Mitchel talked in glowing terms about presenting senior citizens as vital, creative members of the community.

Mrs. Jeral wasn't impressed.

"I'd always been interested in the theater, but I wasn't very taken with this group," she said. "Everybody seemed to be so old, and I thought their skits were . . . well, kind of awkward."

Leader Vivian Mitchel sets the stage for her senior troupe.

BUT MRS. JERAL decided to give it another chance and today she's one of the most emphatic supporters of "Acting Up." "I was really amazed at all the creativity . . . I found that you really don't have to sit in a rocking chair and rock yourself."

As Mrs. Jeral's opinions have changed, so has the scope of the 12-member troupe. While most of their material is off the cuff, Ms. Mitchel, and Ms. Telander are experimenting with originally written scripts as well. Because the skits involve a great deal of audience participation, spectators usually are young — but "Acting Up!" is planning to visit a veterans' hospital next month.

Despite the changes, the philosophy of "Acting Up!" has remained intact.

"Our goal is to break the myth of aging," said Ms. Mitchel, secretary to Oakton College's Patricia Handzel. "Life may not begin at 65, but it certainly doesn't have to end. There are a lot of young people at our performances because many of them have never really known older people. This gives them a chance to relate to seniors on a personal, human basis.

"And by using improvisation, we want to show that people over 60 can be vibrant, loose and quick-thinking — they have to be!"

Indeed.

THE TROUPE'S 1½-hour presentation starts with a slide show introducing the members via snapshots of their lives, from babyhood up to the present. Then Ms. Mitchel and Ms. Telander, a Chicago writer and instructor in Oakton's women's program, go out into the audience, soliciting reactions on everything from "What is life?" to what youngsters think about people over 60.

An "emotional symphony" has "Acting Up" responding physically to audience-suggested emotions such as fear or anger. "That can get a little crazy at times," Mrs. Jeral said. And the skits themselves can be anything from a tug-of-war demonstration to "The Howard Street El," a study of human interaction that includes a 60-year-old pregnant woman.

Since "Acting Up!" portrays older people as energetic, vital members of society, the over-60 members don't concentrate their material on "old age." But there are a few notable exceptions. The troupe is working on a poignant 50th-year high school class reunion, and the closing vignette, "I Wish I Were Older," features a series of dissatisfied people yearning for the authority and freedom of older age. While the complaints continue on stage a man in his 60s has been quietly jogging, waiting for his chance to explain that now

What zaniness lies in the minds of these men?

by SCOTT FOSDICK

What sort of mind creates the disgustingly hilarious skits that make up "Kentucky Fried Movie?"●

What combination of zaniness and perversity finds humor in a John F. Kennedy tabletop assassination game, a sex instruction record, kung-fu, zinc oxide, television debates and teenage acne?

These skits are not the brainchild of some zoned-out drug fiend from Greenwich Village, as you might imagine. It took three minds to hatch "Kentucky Fried Movie," the three wide-eyed Midwestern minds of Jim Abrahams and the Zucker brothers, David and Jerry.

ABRAHAMS AND THE Zuckers all have incredibly adolescent faces, reflections perhaps of the youthful tone of their humor. The oldest of the three, 33-year-old Abrahams, was in Buffalo Grove last week visiting his sister and promoting the film. While he was here, he took a few hours to discuss the movie and his long association with the Zuckers.

It all began many years ago in Shorewood, a suburb of Milwaukee where Jim, David and Jerry grew up. "Our families knew each other. Our fathers were partners in business," Abrahams said.

One day the Zuckers' father brought home a videotape machine he had borrowed from a friend. Jim, David and Jerry started "horsing around" with it, and that was the beginning of Kentucky Fried Theatre, the comedy revue that later gave birth to "Kentucky Fried Movie."

AT THE TIME, the Zuckers still were in school at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. Abrahams already had been graduated with a major in English and was working as a — get this — private detective for a Milwaukee law firm, investigating bogus insurance claims.

"I'd sneak around and try to get pictures of people playing tennis or doing something physical when they were supposed to be hurt," Abrahams said.

Jim, David and Jerry had absolutely no experience in theater, but one day they began taking their videotape hobby seriously.

"We were sitting in a Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurant when we decided to do a theater group," Abrahams said.

They became the campus rage.

ONE OF THEIR videotape gimmicks involved a two-way mirror set up in the lobby of their small theater. The reflecting side faced out, with a sign next to it encouraging in-coming audience members to straighten their hair, check their make-up and squeeze their acne.

On the other side of the mirror was a camera, relaying the action to a television monitor on stage, for all to see.

In another of their early sketches, a couple made love on a couch while watching a television set tuned to the evening news (actually a mock-up videotape version). As the couple became more involved in lovemaking, the newscaster began to stutter and look up from his script as if he could actually see the couple on the couch.

By the end of the sketch the entire studio crew was staring out of the tube at the scene on the couch. (This sketch has been a regular in their act, and is also part of the movie.)

IT WAS SIX years ago that they started knocking them dead in Madison. In 1972, after just a year there, they packed their bags and headed for the coast. Abrahams said, "We had the desire to be on the Tonight Show." that he is older, he's happy.

It's all quite a switch from the Carol Burnett and Johnny Carson stereotype. These "senior citizens" aren't knitting sweaters and hunting for their false teeth, and according to Ms. Mitchel, their strict adherence to the weekly rehearsal and monthly performance schedules are just a part of their go-out-and-get 'em attitude.

A FEW MEMBERS had theatrical experience before joining the troupe (high school productions are the most common), but most had never faced a footlight before their "Acting Up!" debut. As a result of the on-stage experience, several have indicated an interest in community theater. For others, the increased confidence has spurred them to sign up for college classes.

"You'd be amazed at the changes in these people," Ms. Mitchel said. "Even though most of them have led busy, active lives, many of them were terrified at first . . . they had to be pushed into it, and it took several months to unwind."

"Of course, they'd been through 60 or 65 years of being told to be prim and proper — this group is helping them remove all the 'shoulds' "

"Acting Up!" is interested in scheduling performances throughout the Chicago area. For more information, Vivian Mitchel may be contacted at 967-5120, Ext. 350.

'Kentucky Fried' a spicy treat

by SCOTT FOSDICK

Are you ever overcome by a cynicism so palpable you could slice it with a razor?

Do you feel you've reached the point where there is nothing you hold sacred? Is there no cross you'd bear even for a few yards?

Take heart, there still may be a shred of decency left in you. And if there is, "Kentucky Fried Movie" will ferret it out and thoroughly offend it.

"Kentucky Fried Movie," which opens today in the Chicago metropolitan area, is the product of six years of comedy by Kentucky Fried theater, a group of Wisconsin actors and writers transplanted in Los Angeles.

KENTUCKY FRIED Theatre is a bawdy version of Chicago's "Second City." Its movie is made up of 22 separate sketches, most of which orginated on stage. While its cinematic predecessor, "The Groove Tube," concentrated on television, "Kentucky Fried Movie" includes spoofs on the movie industry.

I laughed even harder at "Kentucky Fried Movie" than I did at "The Groove Tube." Of course, there are those who walked out on "The Groove Tube," and if they're dumb enough to see "Kentucky Fried Movie," they'll probably walk out on it, too.

But there's no arguing taste — or the lack of it. This movie will make you cry with laughter, but somewhere along the line it also will turn your stomach or make you mad.

"Catholic High School Girls In Trouble," a take-off on pornographic film trailers, is the one that got to me. I never could see the humor of grossly large women's breasts shot close-up. It wasn't funny when controversial Italian director Lina Wermueller did it and I don't think it's funny here.

THEN THERE'S "National Appeal for the Dead," the sketch that writer Jim Abrahams says alienates the most people. It features a family that refuses to let death be a handicap for its youngest member. Instead of burying the child's corpse, they prop it up at the dinner table and take it with them on family outings.

It was gross, macabre and inescapably low-brow; but while those around me turned green with disgust, I roared gleefully.

The essential ingredient of all humor is the ability to step back and shrug your shoulders at something which considered up close causes fear, pain or grief.

Without this ability, we would cry rather than laugh at such stock situations as pratfalls, teen-age acne and The Bomb. It is when the object of humor is too sacred or too real (such as the human body, or death) that we are unable to step back and laugh.

The sacred and the real are different for all of us, as "Kentucky Fried Movie" naively demonstrates. Intended as simple entertainment, this R-rated movie is an excellent tool for discovering what we find offensive.

We may laugh till we're sick through most of it, but in the end this litmus test always comes up blue. Try it, if your sensibilities don't mind an occasional shock.

'Kentucky Fried Movie'— treading thin line of taste

Did they ever make it on The Tonight Show?

"Yeah, and we bombed," Abrahams said.

"TV is geared to mass production. They didn't spend five minutes figuring out how to transfer it to TV. They didn't focus the camera on the joke."

FRUSTRATED BY the time pressures and the censorship of television, last year they turned to film and started working on "Kentucky Fried Movie." They put up their own money to create a 10-minute segment to show potential backers. All the studios turned them down, but eventually they hitched up with the United Film Distribution Co., and "bang, bang, bang, things began to happen," Abrahams said.

"To have as much control as we had I understand is very unusual. The people who gave us the money never put any pressure on us. Nobody ever said, 'No, you can't do that'."

"Kentucky Fried Movie" opened in Los Angeles and New York last month, and opens today in the Chicago metropolitan area. Abrahams still considers himself a Midwesterner and is incensed that movies have to pass a trial run on the coasts.

"Unless New York and L.A. have condoned a movie, the rest of the country isn't allowed to see it," he said. "Fortunately, it's done well in those two cities."

ABRAHAMS HAS more than a passing irritation with the snobbery of people who live in the large coastal cities. He said he believes the humor of the Kentucky Fried theater group and movie has its roots in his and the Zuckers' Milwaukee upbringing.

"People who live on the coast tend to think they live where it's at. So there's less of an ability to laugh at yourself, less humility.

"I find that is the seed of our humor," Abrahams said. "It's just coming ou tof an environment where you're able to laugh at yourself. There's a tendency on the coasts to take yourself seriously."

As a result, Kentucky Fried Theatre finds humor in practically everything, including the lewd and gruesome. The movie is not for young viewers.

"Originally it was rated X, because of the last scene, in front of the TV," Abrahams said, referring to the newscaster/lovers sketch described above.

THAT SCENE WAS re-edited, however, and now the movie is rated R.

Does Abrahams consider the movie just light entertainment, or does the satire on the media have an underlying message?

"I suspect not," he said. "I don't think it will have much of a lasting effect."

He is somewhat apologetic about the use of naked women in the film:

"It was our first venture and we were told that certain things make films successful. It helps to have a shocking scene somewhere."

HE SAID THEIR next film, a spoof of 1950s melodramas, will be more sophisticated and probably will have a PG rating.

Abrahams isn't apologetic about the dubious taste of his sketches, however. He shows an almost boyish glee when he talks about scenes designed to offend the public's sense of propriety.

"A lot of segments of the movie offend somebody. I think they feel it's in horrible taste, but laugh despite themselves.

"We really tread the line of tasteful tastelessness."

Movie guide

Designed to help readers decide which movies they want to see, this guide includes a listing of movies currently playing the area, plus capsule summaries and comments. Films reviewed are rated excellent, four stars; good, three stars; fair, two stars and poor, one star.

"The Bad News Bears in Breaking Training" — There may be a built in audience among those who rallied around the original "Bears" but this disappointing sequel has none of the sharply intelligent humor and pivotal performances of the original, substituting soppy sentimentality and sitcom one-liners instead. (PG).

"Other Side of Midnight" — Sidney Sheldon's globe-hopping novel, a giant bestseller, about rags-to-riches characters and love lost and love regained at any cost, transferred to the screen as an opulently mounted tearjerker. (PG). ★★½

"Greased Lightning" — Richard Pryor successfully tackles his first dramatic starring role as black stock car champion Wendell Scott in an involving old-fashioned success story with just the right blend of action, drama and good humor. (PG).

"Cousin, Cousine" — Two cousins-by-marriage fall into an immensely sympathetic adulterous affair in this simple and very charming French comedy. Set against a progression of closely knit family occasions, the film has a rich texture of characterizations and an infectious spirit of joy. (R).

"Airport '77" — Another plane innperil, this one owned by multimillionaire James Stewart and populated by hijacking art thieves along with a traditionally all-star cast. The plane sinks into the Bermuda Triangle and is eventually retrieved by a crackerjack Naval operation. (PG)

'Kentucky Fried' a spicy treat

by SCOTT FOSDICK

Are you ever overcome by a cynicism so palpable you could slice it with a razor?

Do you feel you've reached the point where there is nothing you hold sacred? Is there no cross you'd bear even for a few yards?

Take heart, there still may be a shred of decency left in you. And if there is, "Kentucky Fried Movie" will ferret it out and thoroughly offend it.

"Kentucky Fried Movie," which opens today in the Chicago metropolitan area, is the product of six years of comedy by Kentucky Fried theater, a group of Wisconsin actors and writers transplanted in Los Angeles.

KENTUCKY FRIED Theatre is a bawdy version of Chicago's "Second City." Its movie is made up of 22 separate sketches, most of which orginated on stage. While its cinematic predecessor, "The Groove Tube," concentrated on television, "Kentucky Fried Movie" includes spoofs on the movie industry.

I laughed even harder at "Kentucky Fried Movie" than I did at "The Groove Tube." Of course, there are those who walked out on "The Groove Tube," and if they're dumb enough to see "Kentucky Fried Movie," they'll probably walk out on it, too.

But there's no arguing taste — or the lack of it. This movie will make you cry with laughter, but somewhere along the line it also will turn your stomach or make you mad.

"Catholic High School Girls In Trouble," a take-off on pornographic film trailers, is the one that got to me. I never could see the humor of grossly large women's breasts shot close-up. It wasn't funny when controversial Italian director Lina Wermueller did it and I don't think it's funny here.

THEN THERE'S "National Appeal for the Dead," the sketch that writer Jim Abrahams says alienates the most people. It features a family that refuses to let death be a handicap for its youngest member. Instead of burying the child's corpse, they prop it up at the dinner table and take it with them on family outings.

It was gross, macabre and inescapably low-brow; but while those around me turned green with disgust, I roared gleefully.

The essential ingredient of all humor is the ability to step back and shrug your shoulders at something which considered up close causes fear, pain or grief.

Without this ability, we would cry rather than laugh at such stock situations as pratfalls, teen-age acne and The Bomb. It is when the object of humor is too sacred or too real (such as the human body, or death) that we are unable to step back and laugh.

The sacred and the real are different for all of us, as "Kentucky Fried Movie" naively demonstrates. Intended as simple entertainment, this R-rated movie is an excellent tool for discovering what we find offensive.

We may laugh till we're sick through most of it, but in the end this litmus test always comes up blue. Try it, if your sensibilities don't mind an occasional shock.

'Kentucky Fried Movie'— treading thin line of taste

building in Los Angeles into a theater, drew rave reviews and before long had packed houses.

Did they ever make it on The Tonight Show?

"Yeah, and we bombed," Abrahams said.

"TV is geared to mass production. They didn't spend five minutes figuring out how to transfer it to TV. They didn't focus the camera on the joke."

FRUSTRATED BY the time pressures and the censorship of television, last year they turned to film and started working on "Kentucky Fried Movie." They put up their own money to create a 10-minute segment to show potential backers. All the studios turned them down, but eventually they hitched up with the United Film Distribution Co., and "bang, bang, bang, things began to happen," Abrahams said.

"To have as much control as we had I understand is very unusual. The people who gave us the money never put any pressure on us. Nobody ever said, 'No, you can't do that'."

"Kentucky Fried Movie" opened in Los Angeles and New York last month, and opens today in the Chicago metropolitan area. Abrahams still considers himself a Midwesterner and is incensed that movies have to pass a trial run on the coasts.

"Unless New York and L.A. have condoned a movie, the rest of the country isn't allowed to see it," he said. "Fortunately, it's done well in those two cities."

ABRAHAMS HAS more than a passing irritation with the snobbery of people who live in the large coastal cities. He said he believes the humor of the Kentucky Fried theater group and movie has its roots in his and the Zuckers' Milwaukee upbringing.

"People who live on the coast tend to think they live where it's at. So there's less of an ability to laugh at yourself, less humility.

"I find that is the seed of our humor," Abrahams said. "It's just coming ou tof an environment where you're able to laugh at yourself. There's a tendency on the coasts to take yourself seriously."

As a result, Kentucky Fried Theatre finds humor in practically everything, including the lewd and gruesome. The movie is not for young viewers.

"Originally it was rated X, because of the last scene, in front of the TV," Abrahams said, referring to the newscaster/lovers sketch described above.

THAT SCENE WAS re-edited, however, and now the movie is rated R.

Does Abrahams consider the movie just light entertainment, or does the satire on the media have an underlying message?

"I suspect not," he said. "I don't think it will have much of a lasting effect."

He is somewhat apologetic about the use of naked women in the film:

"It was our first venture and we were told that certain things make films successful. It helps to have a shocking scene somewhere."

HE SAID THEIR next film, a spoof of 1950s melodramas, will be more sophisticated and probably will have a PG rating.

Abrahams isn't apologetic about the dubious taste of his sketches, however. He shows an almost boyish glee when he talks about scenes designed to offend the public's sense of propriety.

"A lot of segments of the movie offend somebody. I think they feel it's in horrible taste, but laugh despite themselves.

"We really tread the line of tasteful tastelessness."

"The Bad News Bears in Breaking Training" — There may be a built in audience among those who rallied around the original "Bears" but this disappointing sequel has none of the sharply intelligent humor and pivotal performances of the original, substituting soppy sentimentality and sitcom one-liners instead. (PG).

"Other Side of Midnight" — Sidney Sheldon's globe-hopping novel, a giant bestseller, about rags-to-riches characters and love lost and love regained at any cost, transferred to the screen as an opulently mounted tearjerker. (PG). ★★½

"Greased Lightning" — Richard Pryor successfully tackles his first dramatic starring role as black stock car champion Wendell Scott in an involving old-fashioned success story with just the right blend of action, drama and good humor. (PG).

"Cousin, Cousine" — Two cousins-by-marriage fall into an immensely sympathetic adulterous affair in this simple and very charming French comedy. Set against a progression of closely knit family occasions, the film has a rich texture of characterizations and an infectious spirit of joy. (R).

A masterful performance of an outstanding drama

by SCOTT FOSDICK

Review

British playwright David Rudkin has done something extremely rare: he has created a drama that masterfully dissects the conciousness of modern man: his fears, his hopes, and his mythology.

"Ashes" won New York's Obie award last year as the best new play of the season. It received its Chicago premiere Wednesday, and will be performed through Oct. 30 by the St. Nicholas Theater Co., 2851 N. Halsted St.

In this, its season opener, St. Nicholas has lived up to its reputation as the most intelligent company on Chicago's North Side by bringing a drama of such substance to town, and staging it with taste, exacting integrity, and power.

Seeing the play one is both sobered by the tragic lives of the characters, and buoyed by the incredible performances of the actors.

Some stories follow armies across barren continents; "Ashes" traces the path of the psyche across equally barren bodies. The play gets its power by doing what all great plays must do, by linking the specific with the universal.

The specific here is the story of one couple's struggle to conceive a child. Colin and Anne, intensely played by John Malkovich and Carole Lockwood, are unlike many modern couples in that they actually want children. Their failure in their quest for parenthood leads them to suffer the disappointment of their family, the cruel barbs of their neighbors, and the humiliation of medical examinations that first blame Colin and then Anne for their failure.

The only weakness of the performance is in the first act, where the emotions of the characters are occasionally too understated, to the point where we almost forget this is supposed to be happening to real people. There is also a tendency in the beginning to rely too much on the humor of the situation, revealing a hesitancy to deal with the issues head on.

That hesitancy is completely gone by the second act. We become more and more involved in the stark agony of Colin and Anne as they search for some sort of reason why nature would deny them children. They see messages in their defeats, and tie their fate to that of mankind.

"Perhaps there is some sort of evolution here?" Colin asks, caught between the feelings that his grief is solitary and that it is a portent of man's demise.

If our kind does die out, "Ashes" may be seen by future species, or archeologists from other worlds, as the first howl of extinction. It is comforting to think our culture could have an effect on future ones; but, as Colin tells us, "Extinction is final for the thing extinct."

Janet Blair can't save this hackneyed family comedy

by LAURA SCHMALBACH

Review

Janet Blair, leading lady of "Up a Tree" at the Pheasant Run Playhouse in St. Charles, somewhat apologetically used Wednesday's opening night curtain call to explain, "I hope none of you took this play seriously . . . it's just a lot of fun."

Well, there was little danger of anyone taking "Up a Tree" seriously: most of the patrons were far too busy downing Irish coffees and Tequila Sunrises to ponder the plot. But "just a lot of fun?" It must depend on your definition.

If you equate amusement with a hackneyed story line, lousy jokes, and some of the most amateurish acting this side of your high school auditorium, step right up. If not, you'd be well advised to order a double scotch at intermission — or better yet, stay away completely.

To be sure, dinner theaters like Pheasant Run base their appeal on "big names" like Janet Blair; if the light comedy they bring with them is bright and well-written, so much the better. But for many patrons, a Janet Blair or a Bill Bixby or a Rita Morena could be mouthing lines from a Charmin commercial and they'd still buy a ticket. Stardom — or even has-been stardom — is a sure draw.

"Up a Tree's" star does liven up the stage with her color-coordinated polyester pantsuits, trim figure and bouncy red curls. Even if her gestures are exaggerated and her sense of comedy a bit off-center, the Janet Blair fans love her.

But Miss Blair can't begin to salvage Robert Nichols' "family comedy" about a California housewife who sits in a tree (a big bad developer wants to bulldoze it) and winds up running for Congress. Besides being inaccurate and hopelessly out of date — a "hippy" lawyer appears in plastic love beads, ponytail, and brand-new straight-leg jeans (come on!!) -- this play is full of just plain awful oneliners. Sample: "A woman is like a teabag; you never know how strong she is till you stick her in hot water." And how about "(she's so neat) she makes Mr. Clean look like Freddy Filthy."

Not surprisingly, the other actors do little to spark their inane roles. While Diane Kamp's heavy-handed portrayal of the mother-in-law got the only real guffaws of the evening, Gunnar Lewis, as Marge's chauvinist spouse, delivered every line in a hoarse shout — effective the first minute or two but exasperating from there on out.

"Up a Tree" will be at Pheasant Run through Oct. 23.

Lunchtime concerts start Oct. 11

The fall premiere of lunch-time concerts will be at 12:15 p.m. Oct. 11 at First Chicago Center, Dearborn and Monroe, with ballerina Maria Tallchief narrating a program featuring members of the Lyric Opera Ballet in a lecture/demonstration.

Dancers, both in technique preparation and actual performance, will be highlighted with selections taken from the Lyric Ballet repertoire. Miss Tallchief, who is director of the Lyric Opera Ballet, was prima ballerina of the New York City Ballet.

The newly expanded fall/winter series of eleven 40-minute concerts, featuring classical and popular musicl entertainments, will be held on consecutive Tuesdays (with the exception of Dec. 13), through Dec. 27 at First Chicago Center.

Curtain time is 12:15 p.m., however theater patrons are invited to arrive early with their own brown bag lunches or purchase specially packaged items from the "Munch Bar" for 50c per munch. Selections include fresh fruits of the season and assorted cheeses, crackers and confections. A limited supply of box lunches at $2.90 can be purchased by prior mail or phone reservation. These also can be cutomized for special group events or theater parties.

A special subscription series ticket for all 11 concerts is available for $17.50. Single concert tickets are priced at $2.50; student and senior citizen tickets are $1.50. Tickets may be purchased at the door on performance days or through the mail by sending a check payable to Mostly Music, Inc. and a stamped self-addressed envelope to First Chicago Center, 1 First National Plaza, Chicago, Illinois 60670.

For more reservation information and group sales, contact Mostly Music, 924-2550, before 10 a.m. or after 6 p.m.

"Open to the Public" All year 'Round

A masterful performance of an outstanding drama

by SCOTT FOSDICK

Review

British playwright David Rudkin has done something extremely rare: he has created a drama that masterfully dissects the conciousness of modern man: his fears, his hopes, and his mythology.

"Ashes" won New York's Obie award last year as the best new play of the season. It received its Chicago premiere Wednesday, and will be performed through Oct. 30 by the St. Nicholas Theater Co., 2851 N. Halsted St.

In this, its season opener, St. Nicholas has lived up to its reputation as the most intelligent company on Chicago's North Side by bringing a drama of such substance to town, and staging it with taste, exacting integrity, and power.

Seeing the play one is both sobered by the tragic lives of the characters, and buoyed by the incredible performances of the actors.

Some stories follow armies across barren continents; "Ashes" traces the path of the psyche across equally barren bodies. The play gets its power by doing what all great plays must do, by linking the specific with the universal.

The specific here is the story of one couple's struggle to conceive a child. Colin and Anne, intensely played by John Malkovich and Carole Lockwood, are unlike many modern couples in that they actually want children. Their failure in their quest for parenthood leads them to suffer the disappointment of their family, the cruel barbs of their neighbors, and the humiliation of medical examinations that first blame Colin and then Anne for their failure.

The only weakness of the performance is in the first act, where the emotions of the characters are occasionally too understated, to the point where we almost forget this is supposed to be happening to real people. There is also a tendency in the beginning to rely too much on the humor of the situation, revealing a hesitancy to deal with the issues head on.

That hesitancy is completely gone by the second act. We become more and more involved in the stark agony of Colin and Anne as they search for some sort of reason why nature would deny them children. They see messages in their defeats, and tie their fate to that of mankind.

"Perhaps there is some sort of evolution here?" Colin asks, caught between the feelings that his grief is solitary and that it is a portent of man's demise.

If our kind does die out, "Ashes" may be seen by future species, or archeologists from other worlds, as the first howl of extinction. It is comforting to think our culture could have an effect on future ones; but, as Colin tells us, "Extinction is final for the thing extinct."

Janet Blair can't save this hackneyed family comedy

by LAURA SCHMALBACH

Review

Janet Blair, leading lady of "Up a Tree" at the Pheasant Run Playhouse in St. Charles, somewhat apologetically used Wednesday's opening night curtain call to explain, "I hope none of you took this play seriously . . . it's just a lot of fun."

Well, there was little danger of anyone taking "Up a Tree" seriously: most of the patrons were far too busy downing Irish coffees and Tequila Sunrises to ponder the plot. But "just a lot of fun?" It must depend on your definition.

If you equate amusement with a hackneyed story line, lousy jokes, and some of the most amateurish acting this side of your high school auditorium, step right up. If not, you'd be well advised to order a double scotch at intermission — or better yet, stay away completely.

To be sure, dinner theaters like Pheasant Run base their appeal on "big names" like Janet Blair; if the light comedy they bring with them is bright and well-written, so much the better. But for many patrons, a Janet Blair or a Bill Bixby or a Rita Morena could be mouthing lines from a Charmin commercial and they'd still buy a ticket. Stardom — or even has-been stardom — is a sure draw.

"Up a Tree's" star does liven up the stage with her color-coordinated polyester pantsuits, trim figure and bouncy red curls. Even if her gestures are exaggerated and her sense of comedy a bit off-center, the Janet Blair fans love her.

But Miss Blair can't begin to salvage Robert Nichols' "family comedy" about a California housewife who sits in a tree (a big bad developer wants to bulldoze it) and winds up running for Congress. Besides being inaccurate and hopelessly out of date — a "hippy" lawyer appears in plastic love beads, ponytail, and brand-new straight-leg jeans (come on!!) -- this play is full of just plain awful oneliners. Sample: "A woman is like a teabag; you never know how strong she is till you stick her in hot water." And how about "(she's so neat) she makes Mr. Clean look like Freddy Filthy."

Not surprisingly, the other actors do little to spark their inane roles. While Diane Kamp's heavy-handed portrayal of the mother-in-law got the only real guffaws of the evening, Gunnar Lewis, as Marge's chauvinist spouse, delivered every line in a hoarse shout — effective the first minute or two but exasperating from there on out.

"Up a Tree" will be at Pheasant Run through Oct. 23.

Lunchtime concerts start Oct. 11

The fall premiere of lunch-time concerts will be at 12:15 p.m. Oct. 11 at First Chicago Center, Dearborn and Monroe, with ballerina Maria Tallchief narrating a program featuring members of the Lyric Opera Ballet in a lecture/demonstration.

Dancers, both in technique preparation and actual performance, will be highlighted with selections taken from the Lyric Ballet repertoire. Miss Tallchief, who is director of the Lyric Opera Ballet, was prima ballerina of the New York City Ballet.

The newly expanded fall/winter series of eleven 40-minute concerts, featuring classical and popular musicl entertainments, will be held on consecutive Tuesdays (with the exception of Dec. 13), through Dec. 27 at First Chicago Center.

Curtain time is 12:15 p.m., however theater patrons are invited to arrive early with their own brown bag lunches or purchase specially packaged items from the "Munch Bar" for 50c per munch. Selections include fresh fruits of the season and assorted cheeses, crackers and confections. A limited supply of box lunches at $2.90 can be purchased by prior mail or phone reservation. These also can be cutomized for special group events or theater parties.

A special subscription series ticket for all 11 concerts is available for $17.50. Single concert tickets are priced at $2.50; student and senior citizen tickets are $1.50. Tickets may be purchased at the door on performance days or through the mail by sending a check payable to Mostly Music, Inc. and a stamped self-addressed envelope to First Chicago Center, 1 First National Plaza, Chicago, Illinois 60670.

For more reservation information and group sales, contact Mostly Music, 924-2550, before 10 a.m. or after 6 p.m.

Holidays spinning out records now

by ROB PATTERSON

DISCovering rock

Preholiday shopping periods seem to get longer every year, but nothing quite prepared me for the record business. It's only September and they've already started. The virtual landslide of vinyl from now until early December is sure to be so voluminous that it is best to start sorting the good from the bad now before we all get lost.

Livin' On The Fault Line. (The Doobie Brothers) — For a band usually identified with top 40 singles and outright commercialism, the Doobies consistently have made albums of high over-all merit. Since adding ace guitarist "Skunk" Baxter and vocalist-pianist Mike McDonald from Steely Dan; their chunky, rollicking rhythms have become more silky, soulful and sophisticated. Their latest lp continues the trend. Jazz inflections have crept in (check out "Chinatown"), while McDonald's ballads remain subtle but grabbing. And, of course, there's some usual Doobies-styled fun (like "Echoes of Love").

Karla Bonoff — The first effort by this resident L.A. songwriter will no doubt remind many of Linda Ronstadt, who, along with Bonnie Raitt, has recorded Bonoff's fine songs. Nonetheless, Bonoff establishes a personality of her own on familiar compositions such as the bittersweet "Someone To Lay Down Beside Me" and "Home." She's also come up with a few more winners, like the trotting, country chestnut, "I Can't Hold On," a calypso "Isn't It Always Love" and a bubbling rendition of Steve Ferguson's "Flying High."

Happy The Man — This is a near perfect record, HTM is a young Washington, D.C. band which has taken the symphonically textured, progressive rock developed by King Crimson and Genesis and turned it into a sound that is exciting and highly seductive. Songs like "Stumpy Meets The Firecracker in Stencil Forest," "Knee Bitten Nymphs in Limbo" and "Mr. Mirror's Reflection On Dreams" are instrumentally drawn musical cartoons. The compositions and musical virtuosity rival anything in progressive rock or jazz today. A delight.

Pacific Ocean Blue (Dennis Wilson) — The first solo album by any Beach Boy is an event, but don't go expecting fun, fun, fun here. Most of this is in the thick, serious vein of "Surf's Up," kinda reeling out a sound as rich and sticky as honey. Drummer D. Wilson's solo flight is a little too disjointed and full of "personal expression for my tastes, but "River Song," and the touching, light hearted, "Rainbow" are awfully nice cuts.

A Year At The Top (Greg & Paul) — And now, in the grand tradition of the Archies and the Monkees . . . From what's on the first lp by this latest musical TV duo, they must have made a pact with the devil to make it. Thank God it was a short year.

Osamu (Osamu Kitajima) — It takes a lot to maintain my interest through a totally instrumental pop album, but this one by Japanese instrumental wizard Kitajima is intriguing. He combines rock, jazz, electronics and traditional Japanese music into suites that range from mini-symphonies to fat-back funk. It could have the success that "Tubular Bells" did a few years back, and introduce ground-breaking inventiveness to the public at large.

Topaz — Now here's a bit of bluesy, power-trio rock like we ain't seen in a while. Ex-Dylan bassit Rob Stoner joins together with searing guitarist Billy Cross and rattlesnake-throated Texas vocalist Jasper Hutchinson to create musical fireworks. Though the thrust is rock 'n roll, they even throw in a little CSN/Y harmonizing ("Reading Your Eyes") and a cowboy-funk jam ("Texas") to display their versatility. Quite a gem.

The Cate Bros. Band — "Union Man" helped expose the Cates' hickory-bark soulfulness to the public a while back. Now this, their third album, again present ample evidence why they are one of America's most consistently enjoyable groups. Everyone can find something familiar and favorite to grab noto in the Cates' yet-distinctive style — be it soul, '50s, flavorings, a beat to dance to or just plain good playing.

Terrapin Station (The Grateful Dead)—A friend in college once bet that I would be a "Dead Head" by graduation. I remained a non-believer till the end and won the bet. Considering my outlook, the fact I find this latest Dead album so compelling no doubt means it's their best in years. Here, the "Mr. Natural" truckers have an underlying spark not usually present, while the rock and roll — such as "Passenger" — is particularly hard-edged. "Terrapin Part I" is a very successful mini-musical, with typical Dead ambition but without their aimlessness.

Dining at Cypress: something for all

The Cypress in Hinsdale is a restaurant with something for everyone.

With four dining areas, a piano bar, banquet facilities and two menus, The Cypress aims to please everyone who has a taste for good food and entertainment.

The four dining areas range in formality from casual to exclusive. The Pub is a lively, somewhat noisy place where diners wear casual clothes and select from the simple pub menu. The Men's Grill, an intimate dining area with horse and hound decor, is a notch up on the formality ladder. Diners in this area select from both the pub menu and the more elaborate dining menu.

Bill o' fare

THE STARLIT Oak Dining Room is for those looking for elegant atmosphere and the sedate Club Room is a coat-and-tie dining area with elegant table settings on white tablecloths. Guests sit on highbacked chairs reminiscent of the era of exclusive supper clubs. Only one menu, the dining menu, is available in the Oak and Club rooms.

BEING A middle-of-the-road type, I selected the Men's Grill where I could examine both menus. The pub menu ranged in price from $3.25 to $6.75 and included hamburgers, filet mignon, bratwurst, shrimp, crab legs, and prime rib of beef.

The dining menu featured myriad hot and cold appetizers plus soups and salads. Entrees included lobster, French roast duck a la orange, steak teriyaki, chateaubriand, beef Wellington, lamb shank and Alaskan king crag legs. Prices ranged from $4.25 to $9.25 with market prices for some of the seafood dishes.

I chose sauteed sea scallops from the dining menu and found them to be very rich and very good. My dining companions generally felt the food was good and well prepared but the service only rated average.

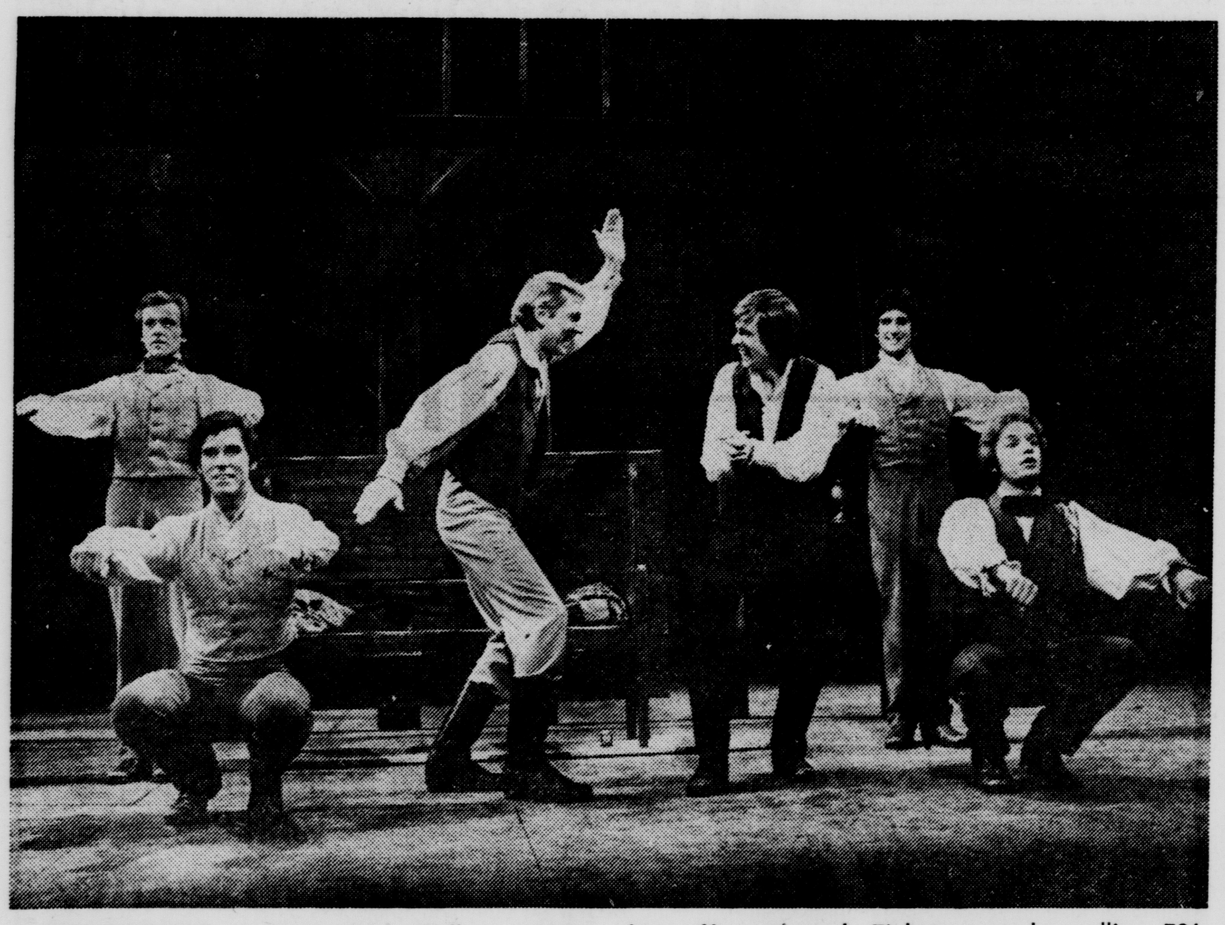
Featuring:
The Cypress

THE CYPRESS opens for luncheons at 11:30 a.m. and dinner is served from 5 to 10:30 p.m. weekdays extending to 11:30 p.m. on weekends. Reservations are strongly advised for weekend diners.

In addition to the four dining areas, The Cypress has a small piano bar where drinks are served and entertainment is available Tuesday through Saturday. Two large banquet facilities also are located in the dining complex.

The Cypress is located on Ogden Avenue in Hinsdale just west of the Tri-State Tollway, I-294. It is about a 40-minute drive from the Northwest suburbs.

—Katherine Rodeghier



"SHENANDOAH" starring John Cullum, center, opens Oct. 4 at the Arie Crown Theatre, McCormick Place. Tickets can be purchased at the box office, through Ticketron or by calling 791-6000. The musical is about a farmer who defends his family during the Civil War.

Italian fete to honor Columbus

You don't have to be Italian to join in the celebration at the third annual Italian Festival at the Hyatt Regency O'Hare Oct. 7, 8 and 9 in honor of Columbus Day.

The Italian Festival, which begins at 7 p.m. Friday, Oct. 7, will provide a change of pace from the traditional October German bands, bratwurst and beer. Instead there will be pizza, Italian ice, Tarantella dancers, wine tasting and a grape crushing contest for visitors to enjoy. The second-floor lobby of the hotel will be decorated with Italian banners and flags, and Italian artisans will be on hand demonstrating and selling their crafts, including pizza-making.

Hours for the festival will be 7 p.m. to 1 a.m. Friday, Oct. 7; and Saturday, Oct. 8; and 10:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., 6 p.m. to midnight on Sunday, Oct. 9. The festival is sponsored by the Chicago chapter of UNICO, an Italian men's civic and charitable organization, and the Hyatt Regench O'Hare Proceeds raised will go to UNICO charities.

The Italianettes, dresed in native costume and performing folk dances from the old country, will open the festival Friday night. Other entertainment scheduled include a performance by the Joint Civic Committee of Italian Americans chorus at 8 p.m. Oct. 8 and by the Italian Cultural Center chorale group at 7 p.m. Oct. 9. At 3 p.m. Oct. 9 four contestants will test their skills in a grape crushing contest.

For those interested in sampling Italian cuisine, Italian pastries and espresso will be available Oct. 7 and Oct. 9 at a cafe in the hotel pool area.

The Hyatt Regency O'Hare is located on River Road, just south of the Kennedy Expressway.

DISCovering rock

Preholiday shopping periods seem to get longer every year, but nothing quite prepared me for the record business. It's only September and they've already started. The virtual landslide of vinyl from now until early December is sure to be so voluminous that it is best to start sorting the good from the bad now before we all get lost.

Livin' On The Fault Line. (The Doobie Brothers) — For a band usually identified with top 40 singles and outright commercialism, the Doobies consistently have made albums of high over-all merit. Since adding ace guitarist "Skunk" Baxter and vocalist-pianist Mike McDonald from Steely Dan; their chunky, rollicking rhythms have become more silky, soulful and sophisticated. Their latest lp continues the trend. Jazz inflections have crept in (check out "Chinatown"), while McDonald's ballads remain subtle but grabbing. And, of course, there's some usual Doobies-styled fun (like "Echoes of Love").

Karla Bonoff — The first effort by this resident L.A. songwriter will no doubt remind many of Linda Ronstadt, who, along with Bonnie Raitt, has recorded Bonoff's fine songs. Nonetheless, Bonoff establishes a personality of her own on familiar compositions such as the bittersweet "Someone To Lay Down Beside Me" and "Home." She's also come up with a few more winners, like the trotting, country chestnut, "I Can't Hold On," a calypso "Isn't It Always Love" and a bubbling rendition of Steve Ferguson's "Flying High."

Happy The Man — This is a near perfect record, HTM is a young Washington, D.C. band which has taken the symphonically textured, progressive rock developed by King Crimson and Genesis and turned it into a sound that is exciting and highly seductive. Songs like "Stumpy Meets The Firecracker in Stencil Forest," "Knee Bitten Nymphs in Limbo" and "Mr. Mirror's Reflection On Dreams" are instrumentally drawn musical cartoons. The compositions and musical virtuosity rival anything in progressive rock or jazz today. A delight.

Pacific Ocean Blue (Dennis Wilson) — The first solo album by any Beach Boy is an event, but don't go expecting fun, fun, fun here. Most of this is in the thick, serious vein of "Surf's Up," kinda reeling out a sound as rich and sticky as honey. Drummer D. Wilson's solo flight is a little too disjointed and full of "personal expression for my tastes, but "River Song," and the touching, light hearted, "Rainbow" are awfully nice cuts.

A Year At The Top (Greg & Paul) — And now, in the grand tradition of the Archies and the Monkees . . . From what's on the first lp by this latest musical TV duo, they must have made a pact with the devil to make it. Thank God it was a short year.

Osamu (Osamu Kitajima) — It takes a lot to maintain my interest through a totally instrumental pop album, but this one by Japanese instrumental wizard Kitajima is intriguing. He combines rock, jazz, electronics and traditional Japanese music into suites that range from mini-symphonies to fat-back funk. It could have the success that "Tubular Bells" did a few years back, and introduce ground-breaking inventiveness to the public at large.

Topaz — Now here's a bit of bluesy, power-trio rock like we ain't seen in a while. Ex-Dylan bassit Rob Stoner joins together with searing guitarist Billy Cross and rattlesnake-throated Texas vocalist Jasper Hutchinson to create musical fireworks. Though the thrust is rock 'n roll, they even throw in a little CSN/Y harmonizing ("Reading Your Eyes") and a cowboy-funk jam ("Texas") to display their versatility. Quite a gem.

The Cate Bros. Band — "Union Man" helped expose the Cates' hickory-bark soulfulness to the public a while back. Now this, their third album, again present ample evidence why they are one of America's most consistently enjoyable groups. Everyone can find something familiar and favorite to grab noto in the Cates' yet-distinctive style — be it soul, '50s, flavorings, a beat to dance to or just plain good playing.

Terrapin Station (The Grateful Dead)—A friend in college once bet that I would be a "Dead Head" by graduation. I remained a non-believer till the end and won the bet. Considering my outlook, the fact I find this latest Dead album so compelling no doubt means it's their best in years. Here, the "Mr. Natural" truckers have an underlying spark not usually present, while the rock and roll — such as "Passenger" — is particularly hard-edged. "Terrapin Part I" is a very successful mini-musical, with typical Dead ambition but without their aimlessness.

Dining at Cypress: something for all

Bill o' fare

The Cypress in Hinsdale is a restaurant with something for everyone.

With four dining areas, a piano bar, banquet facilities and two menus, The Cypress aims to please everyone who has a taste for good food and entertainment.

The four dining areas range in formality from casual to exclusive. The Pub is a lively, somewhat noisy place where diners wear casual clothes and select from the simple pub menu. The Men's Grill, an intimate dining area with horse and hound decor, is a notch up on the formality ladder. Diners in this area select from both the pub menu and the more elaborate dining menu.

THE STARLIT Oak Dining Room is for those looking for elegant atmosphere and the sedate Club Room is a coat-and-tie dining area with elegant table settings on white tablecloths. Guests sit on highbacked chairs reminiscent of the era of exclusive supper clubs. Only one menu, the dining menu, is available in the Oak and Club rooms.

BEING A middle-of-the-road type, I selected the Men's Grill where I could examine both menus. The pub menu ranged in price from $3.25 to $6.75 and included hamburgers, filet mignon, bratwurst, shrimp, crab legs, and prime rib of beef.

The dining menu featured myriad hot and cold appetizers plus soups and salads. Entrees included lobster, French roast duck a la orange, steak teriyaki, chateaubriand, beef Wellington, lamb shank and Alaskan king crag legs. Prices ranged from $4.25 to $9.25 with market prices for some of the seafood dishes.

I chose sauteed sea scallops from the dining menu and found them to be very rich and very good. My dining companions generally felt the food was good and well prepared but the service only rated average.

The doctor says

Used vein difficult for drawing blood

I am ashamed to complain about what is routinely a painless, quick and easy process of drawing blood, but it isn't true in my case.

Twice a year for six years I have endured painful and always futile efforts of two supposedly trained technicians trying to get blood for thyroid and potassium tests. Finally, the doctor has to do it himself, using veins other than those inside my elbows. By that time I am a nervous wreck.

It never gets any better. Is there a solution for me?

Veins that have been used frequently often scar or undergo so much thickening and inflammation that they are no longer useful. In the course of time the inflammation subsides and some of them open again, but some never do. When a vein undergoes these changes blood has to be drawn from some other location. In severe problems when drawing blood or inserting a needle to supply fluids or medicine is essential it may be necessary to do a "cut down," meaning cutting the skin and surgically exposing the vein to be used.

The pain of a needle puncture can be minimized or abolished by spraying the skin with one of the coolants that evaporate on the skin and deadens the sensation momentarily in that area. The veins can be made more prominent by using a blood pressure cuff around the upper arm rather than just a piece of rubber tubing. The pressure on the cuff can be adjusted high enough to impede flow through the veins, causing them to stand out but not high enough to block the arterial flow into the arm. Warm soaks over the skin also helps in some cases.

Despite all of these efforts if a vein is scarred or obstructed it is not likely that anyone will be successful using that vein.

Is there a home remedy you can take that will prevent the formation of kidney stones? I have heard that one teaspoon of honey with a tablespoon of vinegar daily would do this or a can of beer daily was recommended by a doctor. My husband has had surgery for kidney stones.

The best home reedy in the world for kidney stones is to drink enough water. Because sweating and other factors affect how much water you need the rule is to drink enough liquids to form two liters (about two quarts) and even better, three quarts of urine a day.

The increased urine flow should be maintained evenly over the 24 hour period. that means drinking water around the clock and a reasonable amount before going to bed.

Specifically using vinegar or honey will not prevent a kidney stone. Depending upon the type of stone — what it is made of — the doctor may wish to give medicine to acidify the urine. Beer is worse than useless. It contains oxalate which is often a factor in the formation of some types of kidney stones.

Transform utility table into baby's portable tub

Dear Roberta: I hope other young mothers will be able to use this idea for a portable cabinet. Before our first baby was due, my husband repainted an old kitchen utility table (with shelves) for the nursery. After our daughter arrived, I covered the top shelf with a towel and put the baby bathtub on it. since the cart was on wheels, I could wheel it into the bathroom, fill the tub, and push it back into her room to bathe her. The other shelves were useful for baby supplies. —Paula Rowh

When my children were tiny, I bathed them in a wee tub in the kitchen, as it was the only room with enough surface space to have the baby bath and towels ready at waist height. I wish I'd thought of looking for such a table as yours. Parents-to-be could buy almost any cabinet with the right dimensions, whether with shelves or drawers. They could then attach casters — or, for stability when resting it in one place, two locking casters — at each leg or corner. Then the top counter would be at an even better height for handling an infant.

Dear Roberta: If you transfer leftover tomato paste from its can to a glass container and pour over it a tablespoon of olive or cooking oil before refrigerating it, it won't mold for a long while. When you need a little more, pour the oil off into another container, and replace it before you put the container back in the fridge. —Mrs. David Streaker

Oswald movie a cheap exploitation

"The Trial of Lee Harvey Oswald" presents the kind of disgusting and outrageous manipulation of facts that is a crime in television docu-drama.

Because it concerns one of the most perplexing tragedies of our time, the made-for-television movie unfortunately will garner high ratings for ABC even though it does nothing but play with the emotions that still are evoked by the 1963 John F. Kennedy assassination.

"Roots" director David Greene has decided he can best secure those high ratings through shock value. In "The Trial. . ." he all too realistically recreates the President's fateful motorcade through the downtown streets of Dallas that Nov. 22.

THERE IS cheering and clapping from the crowd, camera glimpses of the Texas School Book Depository windows, the sudden ringing out of shots and the President's head snapping forward and then backward into the arms of the First Lady.

The pandemonium, the tradedy and the terror of that day are realistically captured, and it is a frightening and chilling experience to live through those moments once again.

The movie closely parallels the events that took place just after the assassination until the time when the captured Oswald was transferred through an underground corridor where, from out of a crowd of newsmen, Jack Ruby intervened with a fatal shot that silenced probably the only hope this country ever had of knowing the real truth behind Kennedy's untimely death.

But in order to allow for Oswald's would-be television trial, ABC has had to alter the facts. At the instant when Oswald would have been shot, a bright flash from a photographer's camera goes off. The picture fades into bright white light, all is silenced and time is stilled.

ALTHOUGH MOST of the movie's characters actually are real persons, historical figures like Jack Ruby have been eliminated and fictional figures like the persistent and dynamic special prosecutor Anson "Kip" Roberts (played by Ben Gazzara) and Oswald's distinguished but baffled defense attorney Matthew Arnold Weldon (played by Lorne Greene) have been added. Both, by the way, carry off their roles with vitality and skill.

The movie sets out to dispel the enigma of Kennedy's alleged assassin through television biographies of Oswald that are aired during his trial. Oswald's own flashbacks also attempt to shed light on his unexplained military discharge, trips to Russia and the like.

However, "The Trial of Lee Harvey Oswald" doesn't succeed in clearing up the troublesome mystery surrounding both Oswald and the Kennedy assassination.

While the first two hours, which air today at 8 p.m. on Channel 7, set the stage, the final two hours, which air Sunday at 8 p.m., are devoted to the trial, which focuses largely on a conspiracy theory that implicates the CIA and Mafia. The surface of other theories are barely scratched while the feelings of Oswald's Russian wife, Marina, and his mother are explored, leaving the viewer as confused as when he started watching.

In all, the same old questions and possibilities are rehashed, no conclusions are reached and the viewer is left shaken by it all.

RATINGS, WHICH mean profits, seem to be the motivation for this ABC travesty. Actor John Pleshette, who bears an uncanny resemblance to Oswald and does an admirable job portraying him, says the movie attempts to illuminate the evidence and questions surrounding the assassination, but admist the movie mostly "tantalizes" the audience.

"Most of the facts that are a base for the movie were taken from the Warren Commission report and from converstations with Marina and Oswald's mother. The movie is careful never to implicate Oswald because, after all, he was never really tried," said Pleshette, a cousin of actress Suzanne Pleshette. "We didn't want to lead the audience one way or the other. We just wanted to tantalize them."

"THE TRIAL OF LEE HARVEY OSWALD"

That says it all. But as if to stoop to some grand, final low in all of this, the network has decided to sponsor a poll, asking viewers to fill out a ballot appearing in next week's TV Guide and vote whether they feel Oswald was guilty or innocent and, if guilty, whether he acted alone or as part of a conspiracy.

That's the kind of cheap shot that turns a national tragedy into profitable entertaining. It is a scheming way to draw viewers to the set two weekend nights and then a Friday morning on Oct. 14 when the balloting results are announced on ABC's "Good Morning, America" in its gossipy "People in the News" segment.

NEOPHYTE television actor Pleshette says he hopes the movie "stimulates" people and inspires a high-level reexamination of the Kennedy assassination. But, he says, he hopes the Oswald role will open new doors for him. "I look at it (the movie) as an actor, not as a moralist" he said.

The attitude may be indicative of the insensitive approach ABC has taken to the Kennedy tragedy. The network has stretched the docu-drama form to the outer limits with this movie, attempting to base a situation that never happened on events that did.

The reckless intermingling of fact and fiction in television drama is a whole other story and one that "Today on TV" will address Saturday.

TV NOTES:

• Steve Edwards was periodically missing from his hosting duties on WLS-TV's "A.M. The recent appointment of David Nelson as station manager and second man on the totem pole at Channel 2 hinted at Derrough's departure.

TV HIGHLIGHTS:

• Johnny Carson celebrates his 15th year as host of the NBC "Tonight Show" in a special two-hour edition of the 90-minute talk show at 10:30 p.m. on Channel 5. Oswald movie a cheap exploitation

"The Trial of Lee Harvey Oswald" presents the kind of disgusting and outrageous manipulation of facts that is a crime in television docu-drama.

Because it concerns one of the most perplexing tragedies of our time, the made-for-television movie unfortunately will garner high ratings for ABC even though it does nothing but play with the emotions that still are evoked by the 1963 John F. Kennedy assassination.

"Roots" director David Greene has decided he can best secure those high ratings through shock value. In "The Trial. . ." he all too realistically recreates the President's fateful motorcade through the downtown streets of Dallas that Nov. 22.

The pandemonium, the tradedy and the terror of that day are realistically captured, and it is a frightening and chilling experience to live through those moments once again.

The movie closely parallels the events that took place just after the assassination until the time when the captured Oswald was transferred through an underground corridor where, from out of a crowd of newsmen, Jack Ruby intervened with a fatal shot that silenced probably the only hope this country ever had of knowing the real truth behind Kennedy's untimely death.

Opera patrons will be transported to the opera and later returned to the Mart Plaza via complimentary transportation. Special after-opera menus will be available in the Signature until 11:30 p.m. nightly.

The Signature's Chef Michael Deliso has agreed to include a lyrical touch of his own with the creation of a new entree for each opera throughout the season. The dining selection is not limited, however, to the special creation of the evening.

For opera patrons who wish to make an evening out of it. Mart Plaza offers accomodations in the house including suites for a special $35 rate.

The Signature/Lyric Opera package offer is available exclusively for Lyric Opera ticket holders.

Arizonians jaw with 'No. 1' CBer

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — He doesn't give smokey reporrs. For one thing he's riding with one.

Arizona Gov. Raul Castro, according to the American Association of CB Radio Operators, is one of the first governors in the United States to hold a citizens' band radio license. He has a CB in both his official state car and personal vehicle.

When his black limousine with license plate "1" rolls down the road, the governor is in reach of the estimated 75,000 Arizonans who have CB radios.

Castro says most of the operators recognize his car, but have trouble believing they are talking with the governor when he comes back, "Arizona One."

"IT'S REALLY very interesting," says Castro. "We'll be driving in the limousine, and drivers will speed by, then slow down and call us when they spot the license "1" and two antennas. They usually can't believe when they ask if they have the governor.

"I get a lot of responses, like, 'Yes, and this is Napoleon.' They assume it's all a joke."

Once they realize they have the state's chief executive, do they discuss politics or tell them what they'd like done?

"Surprisingly, not too much," says Castro. "In most instances, they're so overwhelmed that I'm able to communicate with them, they're just surprised and happy. They ask where I'm going and what I'm doing and a lot of them say, 'We're happy to know you're one of us.' I really can't recall where anyone has come up with a political conversation."

CASTRO AND his wife, Pat — "Arizona Two" — got their licenses about five months ago. Their call signs are KAGT 4714 and KAGT 4715.

"We became interested in CBs because we do so much traveling," said Castro. "We saw things along the road and felt we might be able to help someone. We have police radios in the limousine, but we wanted a way to communicate with motorists that might be in trouble."

He said he felt he had helped quite a few travelers.

"More than anything else, we are able to notify the highway patrol and have them go to the scene," Castro said.

"NO, I DON'T give smokey reports," the governor laughs. "But, the smokeys themselves get kind of interested in the governor on the air. They have a tendency to follow us. Many smokeys have CBs in their cars now, and I've talked with a lot of them."

Castro is being joined on the airways by several other governors.

The association of CB radio operators says 20 of the 50 governors have accepted its offer to install CB's in their official cars.
